'Dictator and Worse'

By Robert C. Albright

Opponents of the lend-lease bill launched a bitter-end attack in the Senate yesterday with a charge that the White House "has become general headquarters for the Second World War."

Three last-ditch opponents took the Senate floor to allege war involvement would follow passage. A fourth, in a minority report, said the bill made the President "a dictator and worse."

Administration leaders sat mostly silent through the storm of opposition. They claim a nearly 3-to-1 voting edge for the measure, and their new strategy calls for a minimum of talk by supporters. A vote before the end of next week was predicted.

One Republican, Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, and one Democrat, Senator Clark, of Missouri, led off for the opposition. A second Republican, Senator Nye, of North Dakota, rounded out the opposition day.

Charges "Power Politics"

Meanwhile, Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, filed minority views saying the bill "is a complete negation of the policy that has been ours in the past and an invitation to the President to take a hand in the game of power politics in every far flung region of the earth."

Two other developments marked the Senate's second day's debate on the measure.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, introduced an amendment saying nothing in the bill shall be construed as authorizing use of land or naval personnel outside this hemisphere or United States territory. More votes are

China May Pay Cost If Willkie Will Go

The Chinese government will shortly extend an official invitation to Wendell L. Willkie to visit China at China's expense, it was reported in diplomatic circles yesterday.

Chungking advisers of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were said to feel that the small cost of such an invitation would be repaid many times in the favorable publicity for the Chinese cause that would follow.

Chinese officials were considering extending the invitation to Willkie because they understood the expense was the only reason he has not already announced plans to visit China, it was said.

'Cute,' Girls Think of Idea For Drafting Dance Partners

A military chest still seems to suit the ladies best.

Half a dozen Government girls yesterday spoke for several thousand feminine employes of Uncle Sam here, when they said the idea of being registered as "dancees" for weekly dances in Washington for men from nearby Army camps is:

"Cute."

"A real part of national defense."

"A chance to meet some fine men."

"A chance for the men to meet some nice girls."

Miss Corinne Perry, 22, of 316 Gallatin Street Northwest, an employe of the Federal Communications Commission, said the idea had been worked successfully by an R. O. T. C. camp near Minneapolis. She was formerly employed in Minneapolis.

"It should be a chance for girls coming here from other cities who have no social connections in Washington to meet some fine men," she said. "It's a real part of national defense."

"I think it's cute," was the reaction of Miss Josephine Pierce, 31, of 2025 I Street Northwest, another employe of the same office. Her preference is for the air corps, she said, pointing to the corps'

Zurich, Feb. 18.—Using the "isolation" of Turkey and Russia's consent as clubs, Adolf Hitler tonight was reported to have demanded that Greece conclude a "quick peace" with Italy under threat of turning the Greek peninsula into a battleground.

The British, having suffered a severe diplomatic blow in the new Turkish-Bulgarian declaration of nonaggression, issued a blunt warning of war to Bulgaria, across whose territory Hitler's Balkan army would strike to enforce the ultimatum on Greece.

Authoritative quarters in Sofia said that Germany, acting quickly before Britain can reinforce her Balkan foothold by rushing troops to Greece from Africa, already has launched conversations there giving the Greeks a grim choice.

Either Greece must agree immediately to an armistice with Italy or the German army will sweep down through Bulgaria and perhaps Yugoslavia and occupy the country before British reinforcements can arrive, it was reported.

If the British army beats the Germans into Greece, the Nazis were said to have warned, Greece will become a battlefront overrun by Nazi and British armed forces.

Both the Greeks and Germans denied that any Nazi ultimatum or demands had been served on the Athens government, but high Balkan quarters asserted that such de-

Peace Is Up to Nazis, Turkish Paper Says

Istanbul, Feb. 18 (AP)—Turkish newspapers lauded the Turkish-Bulgarian declaration of nonaggression today as an assurance of peace in the Balkans.

They emphasized that the declaration in no wise conflicts with agreements with other countries' —meaning Turkey's alliances with Britain and Greece. The official paper Ikdam said:

"The only danger now to Balkan peace is the concentration of German troops in Rumania. It is up to Germany to show she does not intend to soil the Balkan peace by advancing on Greece."

Regulations Issued For Island Ports As Welles Rebuffs Japan as Pacificator

By John G. Norris

The United States countered a Japanese declaration of peaceful intentions yesterday with a blunt suggestion that they be expressed in deeds rather than words.

This was the official reaction to a Japanese offer to become a world peacemaker, as President Roosevelt and Congress went forward with plans to strengthen American defenses in the Pacific.

A series of executive orders issued during the day closed United States outposts in the mid-Pacific and Alaska to all but our own Government ships and planes. Except with special permission, no other ships will be allowed to approach within 3 miles of our Pacific islands while no planes may fly over such regions.

At the same time the House Rules Committee voted to bring up for House consideration today a $242,000,000 bill to bolster naval and air bases in the Pacific and Atlantic.

Welles Answers Tokyo

The Japanese declaration that their aims are peaceful, which was coupled with a statement blaming the United States and Great Britain for the present tense Far Eastern situation, was answered by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

"In the very critical world situation which exists," Welles said at a press conference, "the Government of the United States is far more interested in the deeds of other nations than in the statements that some of their spokesmen may make."

The Tokyo statement, made by an official spokesman, declared that

'Until I Die'

Dutch 'Traitor' Is Revealed As Hero Tricked by Nazis

By International News Service

London (Wednesday), Feb. 19.—Kidnaped by air through a Nazi ruse, 78-year-old former Premier Dirk Van de Geer, of Holland, has been locked in a Stuttgart prison because he would not reveal British secrets, a story in the London Daily Mirror said today.

Branded a "traitor" by the London Dutch government-in-exile, the gray-haired old man with the bristling white mustache has turned out to be a hero who frustrated the Germans in the end, according to the bizarre account.

In a plot reminiscent of the American film "Foreign Correspondent" —a current hit in Britain—the statesman was "snatched" from Lisbon while en route from England to the United States early this month.

DE GEER

De Geer, who was premier of the Netherlands when the German invasion came, was supposedly on his way to the Dutch East Indies by way of Portugal and the United States when, on February 4, he suddenly turned off at Lisbon and headed home to Holland in a German plane.

The Dutch government regarded him as a traitor and deserter. But, according to the Daily Mirror, this is the story:

The German aerial kidnaping plot began when De Geer received a report that the health of his wife, still in Holland, was failing, and the Germans would

'Ready for Any Job'

By C. Yates Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Feb. 18.—An Australian imperial force many thousands strong reached Singapore today.

Thus was brought to this Eastern bastion of the British Empire the largest and most powerful reinforcement of men, guns and machines ever to arrive in a single convoy.

A few hours after disembarking at the Singapore naval base from great liners which had transported them 3,000 miles under Australian and British naval escort the Australian troops entrained for already prepared defense stations on the Malayan Peninsula.

Throw Pennies at Generals

The ordered calm of this great naval base was broken by a great uproar as gray vessels came alongside the docks. Bronzed Australians, jamming the rails and portholes, shouted down a band of a famous British regiment until it struck up "Roll Out the Barrel."

Then, thousands of voices joined in and from the top decks a shower of Australian pennies fell upon the British dignitaries, generals and admirals who had gathered on the dock to welcome the commonwealth troops under Maj. Gen. Gordon Bennett.

One of the first soldiers disembarked en route to the waiting trains illustrated the high spirits of the husky Aussies by saying:

"We're all set, fighting fit and ready for whatever jobs are ahead. We don't know our destination, except it's in Malaya, and we don't care."

Preparing to Meet Japan

(Reinforcement of British troops in Malaya, at the tip of which lies Singapore, means that Britain is guarding against a Japanese land thrust at Singapore. Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, British Far Eastern commander in chief, with headquarters at Singapore, attended an Australian war cabinet meeting in Sydney only last Friday, at which time the Australian government said the Far Eastern situation was of the utmost gravity.

The men who arrived today to reinforce the already formidable British, Indian and Malay regiments under the Far East commander in chief are "all Australian." Accompanying the medical corps with the troops were artillery and motor transport.

An Australian official said the force was self-sufficient and completely equipped for front-line service and depended upon Malaya only for fuel and rations.

Every member of the contingent, from the slouch-hatted privates to the commander general, are volunteers, he added.

Col. Jones Denies Attack On the GHA

Repudiates Words Ascribed to Him in Gen. Ireland's Letter

By Gerald G. Gross.
Post Staff Writer

A former Army medical officer denied on the witness stand yesterday that he had described Group Health Association as "an entering wedge to state medicine."

Although this remark had been attributed to him by Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, "my most intimate and respected friend," Col. Glenn I. Jones told the doctors' trial jury that he made no such statement, and that he had not dropped consideration of the G. H. A. scheme "like a hot cake."

Subpenaed by the Government, which is prosecuting the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and 20 individual doctors for alleged restraint of the medical cooperative G. H. A., Col. Jones was questioned for an hour and 11 minutes.

He told of being offered the medical directorship of the Federal workers' clinic when it was being organized early in 1937, and of turning it down on learning that the venture was frowned upon by the local medical society.

His testimony followed immediately after the Government had scored an important victory by having admitted into evidence the secretary's minutes of medical society meetings in 1937 and 1938, closed meetings at which G. H. A. was fully discussed and roundly

British Credit Libyan Victory To Air Tactics

500 Enemy Planes Destroyed on Ground During Campaign

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Forces in Libya, Feb. 18.—Destruction of nearly 500 airplanes on the ground stands out as one of the chief reasons for the success of Britain's Egyptian-Libyan campaign.

In the 600-mile advance from Matruh, Egypt, to the Tripolitanian frontier, the R. A. F. adopted tactics which proved so important to the success of the Germans in their conquests of the Lowlands and France last year.

It smashed Italian communications, pounded strongholds like artillery, strafed retreating columns, spotted troop concentrations and patrolled the air over the British ground forces.

But just as important, if not more so, in the opinion of military observers, were operations against Italian airfields, where lie as evidence of the force of the British attacks a sizeable air armada reduced to junk before it could take to the air.

By actual count at one of Libya's nine leading airports—Benina—there were 100 wrecked planes. At El Adem, there were 87; at Berka, 40, and at each of three others, 22. The numbers ranged to as few as seven seaplanes destroyed at the seaplane base of Bomba.

The exponent of this "destroy 'em on the ground" method of aerial

Senate G.O.P. Shows Swing To Lease Bill

Canvass Indicates Half of Republicans May Vote for Measure

A sharp upturn in Senate G. O. P. sentiment for the lend-lease bill, with an outside possibility that half or even a majority of Senate Republicans may support it, was indicated yesterday in an informal canvass.

Republican proponents of the bill counted a minimum of eight of their colleagues for final passage. In addition, there were at least seven Republicans in the so-called doubtful class.

This indicated a strong shift proportionately from the party line vote in the House, where only 24 Republicans voted for the bill and 135 voted "no."

Eight considered practically certain for the bill were Aiken, Austin, Ball, Barbour, Brewster, White, Bridges and Gurney.

McNary Doubtful

In the uncommitted class were Senate Minority Leader McNary, 1940 running mate of Wendell Willkie. Some of his colleagues expect him and his Oregon colleague, Senator Hollman, to vote "Aye."

Other Republicans in the doubtful category were believed to include Burton, Butler, Langer, Wiley and Davis.

'Nearly in War' Just Words, President Says

Harriman Named Defense Expediter, Will Go to London

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

To say that the United States is "nearly in the war" is to mouth a lot of words that don't mean anything, President Roosevelt declared yesterday after Secretary of Commerce Jones had let slip the cryptic phrase while testifying before a House commitee.

This Presidential comment on a remark by his Commerce Secretary and Federal Loan Administrator occurred during a press conference featured by announcement that W. Averill Harriman, business executive who is advising the Office of Production Management, will go to London in ten days or two weeks as a defense expediter.

Harriman will not be on the diplomatic list and his name will not be sent to the Senate for confirmation, the President said.

He indicated that the new appointee, a multimillionaire business executive now serving in the industrials section of the OPM, will handle such questions as contracts, British defense estimates and priorities.

Mr. Roosevelt's comment on the statement by Jones came after the Crusade Mothers Picket Sen. Pepper At Wrong Address

For an hour last night 25 women "crusaders" against the lend-lease bill braved biting winds outside the Wardman Park Hotel to picket Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, only to discover, to their chagrin, that the Senator doesn't live there any more.

The pickets, members of the Mothers' Crusade to Defeat Bill 1776, carried signs proclaiming that "Pepper is unfair to American mothers."

Pepper, who lives at 1661 Crescent Place Northwest, said: "I'm sorry the ladies were out in the cold. If I'd known, I would have done what I could to keep them from being uncomfortable."

Explained Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, of Chicago: "We had bad information on his address. Don't laugh too loud, will you?"

Mrs. Dilling was convicted in Police Court yesterday morning of disorderly conduct Monday in the Capitol, from which she was ejected after an unsuccessful attempt to see Senator Pepper. Sentence was suspended by Judge Walter J. Casey, who said Mrs. Dilling apparently did not intend to be disorderly.

Blustering Cold Due to Continue After Low of 12

When Washingtonians shiver out of bed this morning, the mercury will be rising from a 12-degree low, according to the Weather Bureau. Fair and continued cold with fresh west and northwest winds is the forecast for today.

Winds which averaged 30 miles an hour and reached a peak of 40 miles an hour just before 2 p. m. yesterday added to the discomfort of temperatures which varied from 21 at 7:15 p. m. to a high of 30 at 4:30 p. m.

The same west wind that blew hats and made stockings run in the District yesterday brought shivers to the rest of the Northeast.

Zero or below was recorded in South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan. In some points of Minnesota and North Dakota the mercury dropped to 31 below.

'Dear Schicklgruber . . .'

Here's Your Chance to Heckle Hitler—at His Expense, Too!

Americans started a radio blitzkrieg yesterday against Adolf Hitler—at Der Fuehrer's own expense.

It was set off last Friday by an invitation from the Berlin shortwave radio station, broadcasting to the United States, for Americans to cable at Hitler's expense what sort of shortwave programs they would like to hear. The request was repeated last night.

A barrage of radiograms was let loose from Washington and New York and elsewhere, but the result was not exactly as the Germans apparently had planned.

From the Radio Corporation of America radiogram station in Washington went a score of messages such as:

"Would like to hear the music of Straus more often than you have been playing it." "How about announcement of German double cross in Italy." "Would like to have account of Hitler committing suicide." "Waiting for Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and Mussolini to appear on Information Please against American team of Adams, Kieran and Levant." And, "Soft music and talks by H. V. Kaltenborn, Raymond Gram Swing, Walter Winchell and Roosevelt."

It would not be strictly accurate

40-Mile Wind Blows No Good to D. C. Stockings; Sheer Silk Driven to Shreds, Experts in Dither

Tiny bits of dust, whirled by a 40-mile wind, bit deep into the pride of scores of Washington's women yesterday by cutting their stockings into weird new patterns of holes, runs, and tatters.

The surprise attack, unprecendented in the memory of Government officials, stocking experts, and weather observers, was launched during the morning rush to work.

Its effects appeared without warning on hundreds of the city's shapeliest legs—and apparently materials made little difference.

What had been a stocking became first a stocking with an unexpected run, or maybe a tiny hole, and then something new, an airy thing of gaps and shreds and tears, but no longer a wearable stocking.

Damage was heaviest in downtown around Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. In Government and private offices, young ladies discovered the damage, waited in mild terror to see what the boss would say, then found the boss, if a woman, in the same plight.

At least one downtown department store found its stocking salesgirls afflicted with the stocking malady. Business college students appeared at classes with their first rule of neatness shot to bits.

Most victims looked at the runs and holes and admitted they were baffled. One eyewitness play-by-play of how the damage struck came from Alice W. Skidmore, of 6524 First Street Northwest.

She said that she walked to work along the 1300 block of E Street Northwest, into a biting wind, and she saw swirls of black dust, felt them bite her face.

ON THE RUN

When her stockings started falling apart, she said, she first noticed tiny black specks, then tiny holes—and at the end her stockings were a network of runs.

Her story picked up scientific backing at the Bureau of Standards. Howard E. Shearer, research associate for the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers, stationed at the bureau, examined a pair of the tattered hose, and declared he had found microscopic dust particles.

Shearer scouted the theory that the grit particles might come from one of the West's famous dust storms. He also said that he had checked electricity experts at the bureau and the latter had declared it very unlikely that static electricity could have caused the damage by making the stocking fibers brittle and easily broken.

Shearer suggested the source of the grit might be

U. S. Pilot Dies Bombing Nazis For England

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 18.—Two flights from the American Eagle Squadron have joined the R. A. F. "in action" against Germany, it was reported officially tonight, and Pilot Officer Vernon Charles (Shorty) Keogh, of Brooklyn, was lost on patrol.

How long the Eagle units, of three planes each, have been in combat service was not disclosed, but it was understood that Keogh took part in one of the first offensive flights of the American volunteer squadron last Saturday and did not return.

(Keogh may have been in one of two planes the Germans reported were shot out of a three-plane flight over Norway Saturday. Other R. A. F. operations Saturday included a heavy night assault on the Nazi-held continental coast and a 2,000-mile propaganda pamphlet "raid" over southwest Poland.)

The air ministry news service praised Keogh as "great in offensive spirit and a fighter of outstanding ability."

Less than 5 feet tall, Keogh was the smallest pilot in the R. A. F.'s fighter command. In the United States he was a professional parachute jumper.

Two other American Eagle pilots—Phillip Howard Leckrone, of Salem, Ill., and Edwin Ezell Orbison, of Sacramento, Calif.—have been killed, the latter in a clash with a Nazi plane while on a training flight. A fourth American, William Mead Lindsley Fiske 3d, was killed in a fight as a member of a regular R. A. F. unit last August.

The Minister of Home Security announced today that 1,502 civilians were killed and 2,012 injured in Nazi air raids in January, compared with a December toll of 3,793 killed and 5,044 injured. About half the casualties were in the London area.

An announcement January 20 said up to then from the time the Battle of Britain started on June 18, 1940, the total had been 23,081 dead and 32,296 injured.

A number of dead and injured were added to the toll last night when a bomb crashed through the roof of a London shelter in a 3½-hour raid.

Although definite figures were not issued, many bodies were brought from the shelter, which normally holds several hundred persons. For six hours doctors and nurses worked over the injured.

Four of last night's raiders were shot down.

During the day the government reported but few bombs dropped in south and southeast England.

Reflecting the growth of the R. A. F., the air ministry tonight called for more pilots and observers to man British and American-made bombers and fighters.

The admiralty announced that British and allied merchant shipping losses in the week ended February 9 totaled 13 ships of 29,806 tons, less than half the average total weekly loss since the war's start. They included nine British ships totaling 19,364 tons and four Allied vessels of 10,422 tons. The minesweeper Huntly has been sunk, it was announced.

Japanese Add To Naval Force In Siam Gulf

By the Associated Press

Saigon, French Indo-China, Feb. 18.—Japanese navy units in the Gulf of Siam were reported heavily reinforced today and a Dutch authority forecast land and sea blows at Singapore, Britain's Far Eastern Gibraltar, and at the Netherlands East Indies in the "very near future."

Previously three Japanese cruisers had been reported in the Gulf of Siam, which touches southern Indo-China, Thailand (Siam) and the Malay Peninsula.

Dr. G. A. Lamsvelt, trade commissioner for the Dutch East Indies, completing an 11-day trip in south Indo-China, said:

"Personally, I expect a Japanese move southward in the very near future."

He said he believed the Japanese would take possession of some unoccupied islands south of Indo-China, use Bangkok, Thailand's capital, as an army base to strike by land along the 850-mile Malay Peninsula toward Singapore and, simultaneously, move by sea toward the Indies.

"The Indies are prepared to protect themselves," he said.

Several developments point to a consolidation of Japanese strength in Indo-China, and today there was an unconfirmed report that a Japanese steamer had taken its third load of munitions to storage near Bangkok.

Melbourne, Australia, Feb. 18 (AP).—Acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden said today action was being taken to provide Australia with country-wide air raid protection.

Britain's New Range Finder Boosts Hits on Night Raiders

By Robert E. Bunnelle

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 18.—A range finder with the speed of an electric eye is directing the fire of Britain's anti-aircraft guns in what has been described here as an entirely new type of coordinated air-ground warfare against night bombers.

Increasing experience of the gun crews and picked night fighter pilots in operating in the dark, plus a new night defense scheme and advantages gained by use of the faster range finder, were said to have enabled the British to knock out of the skies greater numbers of invading planes.

Although German air activity over Britain in January was on a comparatively small scale, British anti-aircraft gunners were credited with bagging 11 night raiders. Night fighter planes reported bringing down four, and three crashed for reasons not disclosed officially.

So far this month, seven have been destroyed—all but two by anti-aircraft fire.

Last November, a month of heavy air warfare, only 14 night raiders were shot down, although they came in hundreds. In December, only 10 were bagged at night. That month, too, the raiders were over England in large numbers, night after night.

Ratio of Kills 4 Times Greater

Sources here estimated not more than 1,200 Nazi planes were over Britain at night during the whole of January, whereas in November the total of night raiders was thought to have been 5,000.

On the basis of these figures, the January ratio of "kills" was approximately four times greater than during November.

The new predictor (range finder) has been a hush-hush device, but this much has leaked through the official secrecy: it is a sort of light-ning calculator which at least makes a stab at getting around the big difficulty in range finding—the ratio between the speed of attacking planes and the speed at which the sound of their motors travels.

The old predictors failed to work satisfactorily because by the time a plane flying at 15,000 feet was heard by mechanical ears it would be as much as 3 miles from where it was detected.

Coordination of defenses and increasing experience were said, however, to be even greater factors toward solving the night bomber problem than the use of the new range finder.

The new tactical system involves a combination of the use of searchlights, antiaircraft guns and fighter planes equipped with two-way radios by which they can be guided by ground observers.

Cubes of Responsibility

For ground observation purposes, the sky is divided into cubes of responsibility, with each observer assigned to watch a specific cube.

When the action starts, guns and searchlights switch from one cube or group of cubes to another, letting night fighters take over, and vice versa.

Night fighter pilots—especially picked for ability to see in the dark—get special diets, including a heavy ration of carrots and cod liver oil.

They also receive special training, and there are a number of R. A. F. posts where the night air is almost literally filled with students of the special technique.

These night pilots are using mostly Bolton Paul two-seaters, Blenheim fighter-bombers and Hurricanes, but some American-made planes also are coming into use.

Ground fog is one wet blanket on night fighting. It often prevents the night fighters from going up when bombers are heard overhead, and they have to leave the job to antiaircraft gunners because of the difficulties of landing through the fog should they get up.

One source said German fliers recently had used a new technique in an attempt to baffle the ground gun range findings, flying in wide, looping spirals.

British Air Tactics Won in Africa

warfare is Air Commodore Raymond Collishaw, of Vancouver, British Columbia, who commands the R. A. F. in the desert.

An ace in the World War, Collishaw was given the task of directing the desert air warfare under direction of Air Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, commander of the British Mediterranean air force with headquarters at Cairo.

No respecter of tradition, the bristling, square-jawed Collishaw added his ideas to general headquarters commands, with the result that an Italian air superiority estimated at perhaps two to one at the start of the campaign was reversed.

Fliers Call Him "Collie"

"Collie," as his fliers call him, introduced a new weapon in his war against planes on the ground. He ordered his fliers to use a bomb orjginally intended almost exclusively for destruction of troops, rather than material.

Instead of the delayed fuse type designed to pock an airfield with craters and wreck hangars, Collishaw's men loaded up with bombs which exploded on impact and sprayed shrapnel radially a thousand yards from the explosion point.

Such missiles did little damage to the airport building or fields, but the sharp fragments of metal punctured fuselages, propellers and even motors, thus putting Italian planes out of service.

Collishaw brought down 60 German airplanes in the World War to rank second among all British Empire pilots.

British Sink 4 Axis Vessels In Mediterrean

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 18.—British naval planes seeking Axis shipping in the Mediterranean were reported by the admiralty today to have sunk a 4,000-ton German ship—believed to be the first Nazi vessel bagged in that sea—and damaged three Italian craft.

The admiralty said the Nazi victim was being used by the Italians as a supply ship. It was attacked in the central Mediterranean by planes of the fleet air arm.

The damaged Fascist vessels were described as an auxiliary warship and two supply ships, one of 6,000 tons and the other of 4,000 tons. Attacking pilots reported that when they left the bigger supply ship was emitting clouds of smoke and that her crew was taking to the lifeboats.

British dispatches said the Germans raided the Suez Canal early today, but did not succeed in doing damage.

Except for the air activity, operations elsewhere in the Mediterranean and Africa were at a virtual standstill.

Malta Carnival Off

Valletta, Malta, Feb. 18 (AP).—Axis warplanes flew over this British Mediterranean naval base this morning but left without dropping bombs.

(In Berlin informed sources said strong units of German bombers, protected by fighting planes, scored "noteworthy success on military and war vital objectives" in Malta today.)

Residents of Malta normally would have celebrated a carnival this week. Instead the week has been designated "gas mask practice week."

British Cemetery Machine Gunned

A Southeast Coast Town in England, Feb. 18 (AP).—A German bomber, reported by the British today to have machine-gunned a cemetrey, returned later while a funeral was in progress and was believed shot down by antiaircraft fire and a fighting plane.

U. S. Puts Up Bars At Pacific Bases

British and American "warlike preparations" were causing "anxiety if not misgivings in Japan, and suggested that the situation would be relieved if the United States confined itself to the Western Hemisphere.

Welles would not discuss the specific points of the Japanese declaration beyond his "show us" comment on the Tokyo profession of peaceful intentions.

Another action during the day, however, pointed to the Government's close interest in the Pacific situation and its unswerving intention of cooperating with the British Empire in opposing Japan's efforts toward complete domination of the Far East.

Welles announced that the United States would exchange diplomatic representatives with New England, the only member of the British Commonwealth to which we have not sent a minister.

Yesterday's Presidential orders established "naval defensive sea areas" around and "naval air space reservations" over five strategic areas. One barred all but "public" ships and planes of the United States from coming into the territorial waters around or flying over Guam, Tutuila and Rose Islands in the far Pacific, unless authorized by the Secretary of the Navy.

Another applied similar restrictions to the mid-Pacific islands of Palmyra, Johnston, Midway, Wake and Kingman's Reef, while others affected Kiska and Unalaska Islands in the Aleutians, Kaneohe Bay in Hawaii and the Island of Culebra in the Caribbean. Violators were made subject to criminal penalties.

Turns Out a Hero

Tired and discouraged himself, and worried about his wife, the former premier received permission to leave for the Orient.

But, when he reached the Portuguese capital, he chartered a Lufthansa plane which was supposed to take him to Holland. However, the Mirror account said, De Geer was flown direct to Germany and confronted with demands for information about Britain and the Netherlands Indies.

Naturally, De Geer, who had been working closely with the Dutch government-in-exile in London and with the British officials, was in possession of a great deal of important secret knowledge.

Refuses to Talk

The Mirror said the Nazis presumably picked on him as the victim of their kidnap plot in the belief that he would prove too old to stand up against their threats.

"But they were mistaken," said the paper. "De Geer courageously refused to talk. Consequently he was flung into jail in Stuttgart."

A Dutch official spokesman in London commented: "No matter of what De Geer may have been convinced, he could never play the traitor's part. I am sure he would refuse to be blackmailed into giving away our secrets. Threats of prison or even death would never open his mouth.

"It looks as though another Nazi trick has misfired."

Nazi Advises U. S. Japan Is No Weakling

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 18.—An article appearing in the Information and Article Service of the German high command said today the United States could "make the same mistake as Russia and China" in underestimating the fighting strength of Japan.

"It would set the world aflame once again if America . . . should let its business interests lead to a break with Japan, that is, a member of the three powers pact," the article declared.

The writer continued that Japan, "which for decades has been threatened by the United States has a much stronger force on the seas alone than America seems to realize."

After Japan broke away from the 5-5-3 ratio (with Britain and the United States) she made great strides in sea power, the writer said.

To the publicly recorded 935,000 tons of Japanese fighting ships, he said, must be added several large fighting ships not tabulated—"a number of question marks on the naval register which are certainly no sign of weakness on the part of the Japanese, a mass of small naval fighting craft as well as naval air equipment such as aircraft carriers and mother ships."

The article called special attention to Japan's actual fighting experience in the air over China.

"Americans," the writer said, "are good with figures, so then let them figure out for themselves what British factors which they have included in their reckonings up until now they have to count out to realize what would be left to them if it came to a decisive dispute with the three powers.

"America finds herself on the same crossroads as she did in 1917 at which time she chose the wrong path. This was emphasized by the House Armaments Committee of 1936 which pointed out in a report that selling weapons to other nations caused a business upswing which forced America into the war."

In closing, the article asked its readers:

"Where is America letting its plutocrats drive it?"

4 Ethiopian Chiefs to Fight With Italians

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 18.—Four Ethiopian leaders are rallying their tribesmen to fight under the Italian flag against the British, it was claimed in a Stefani News Agency dispatch from Asmara today.

Hailu, Gugsa, Seyyum, Mangascia and Aialeu Burru are the chieftains named. Of these, Hailu and Seyyum have considerable followings. The latter addressed a meeting of Tigraians in Adowa, Stefani says, expressing his devotion to the Italian government and saying that he would lead his men into battle.

As a matter of fact, the last card the Italians feel they can play is not so much against the British as against Haile Selassie, who is severely blamed by Ethiopians for having run away and who, anyway, was not popular, to say the least.

Today's war bulletin tells of the third day of heavy fighting on the Albanian front, but it claims that the Italian lines have held. The enemy, it says, suffered heavy losses. And then comes that ominous phrase which has so often appeared in recent Italian communiques: "Our losses were also heavy."

In Italian Somaliland it is claimed that British attempts to cross Juba River were thrown back. This bulletin gives the fall of Chisimaio, which had not previously been admitted. The Somali covering troops "completely obstructed the harbor" before leaving, it is stated.

University students are no longer exempt from military service, according to a decree issued today, calling up the second half of the 1921 class. Previously, students could volunteer and many had been accepted, but this is the first time they are given no choice.

The 1921 class already had been notified of its call to colors, but many portions of it have not yet been summoned. It is estimated that the class will total between 250,000 to 300,000.

Nazis Reported Threatening Greece

Yugoslavia Passes Material

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, (Wednesday) Feb. 19 (AP).—German war material has begun passing into Bulgaria over Yugoslav railways, it was reported reliably today as diplomatic circles heard accounts of redoubled German efforts to make Greece come to terms with Italy.

Long lines of sealed railway cars were said to have rolled over the German-Yugoslav frontier en route to Bulgaria as a part of the agreement reached in the interview at Berchtesgaden, Germany, last week between Adolf Hitler and Yugoslav Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic.

This passage of materials was one of the terms mentioned by Ziga Sol, a member of the Croat Peasant Party, who told his constituents the others included a larger share for Germany in this country's agricultural production and the strictest of neutrality by Yugoslavia.

That Yugoslavia would maintain a strict hands-off policy regarding German action in Bulgaria was evdenced by reports from Sofia, Bulgaria, that Premier Cvetkovich or some other high Yugoslav official was expected in Sofia soon to draft a reaffirmation of the Yugoslav-Bulgarian pact of eternal friendship.

Meanwhile, authoritative word came from Greece that German planes are flying daily over Greek territory, coincident with reports that the Nazis have advised Athens to make peace with Italy lest their armies enter the conflict on the Italian side.

Acting under the new Turkish-Bulgarian nonaggression pact—which diplomatic circles interpreted as immobilizing Turkey should the Germans move against Greece—the German Minister to Athens was understood to have told the Greeks that the Germans wanted the Albanian war to end.

The implication was that the peace would have to be on Mussolini's terms and that if it did not come Hitler's Balkan forces would spring at Greece from their Rumanian bases via Bulgaria.

New Bulgarian negotiations with Germany appeared under way. The newspaper Vreme reported in a Bucharest dispatch that King Boris of Bulgaria had gone to Germany yesterday, probably to ask for his country an outlet to the Aegean Sea through Greece.

German scout and photographic planes flying over Greece from across the Bulgarian frontier—from Bulgarian or Rumanian airdromes—were reported to have droned even south of Athens and to have set off as many as three air alarms a day in some towns.

British quarters in Sofia, Bulgaria, said a cleanup soon by imperial forces in Africa would release large numbers of British soldiers for duty in Greece if needed.

Time Is Question

It was generally agreed that several weeks would be needed to transport a sizable British expeditionary force from Africa to Saloniki and that those weeks might be sufficient to permit the Germans to drive well into Greece. Such conditions, it seemed clear, would weigh heavily in the Greek government's decisions of the next few days.

With German airmen already established in Bulgaria's airports and Nazi troops poised on the Bulgarian-Rumanian frontier, some diplomats thought that the Greeks might decide that British aid would come too late.

These diplomatic quarters declared that, whatever was said in London, the British government saw significance in the Turkish-Bulgarian accord.

They referred to a dispatch from Reuters, British news agency, in which George W. Rendel, the British Minister to Bulgaria, was represented as saying:

"If Bulgaria loses her neutrality and the war is brought to Bulgaria it will be solely and directly on the initiative of Germany. The question whether the (British) legation remains or not depends solely on the movements of the Germans."

British Bid for 2 Old U. S. Colliers

Copyright by New York Times

Washington, Feb. 18.—British interests were the highest bidders today for two giant naval colliers, easily convertible into cargo carriers, each of the vessels of 19,000 tons displacement. The ships are the Proteus and the Nereus which the Navy has certified are no longer needed by the American service. Both ships were built before the first World War.

The British bid, submitted by Saguenay Terminals Ltd., of Montreal, was $260,000 for the Nereus and $327,000 for the Proteus.

Adoption of the Garand semiautomatic rifle for the Marine Corps in place of the 1903 model Springfield, was announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

This decision of the commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, was based on exhaustive tests of the Garand and other rifles recently conducted on the West Coast. Besides the Garand and the Springfield, the tests involved the new Johnson and Winchester semiautomatic rifles.

Britain, Indies Ready to Force Japan's Hand

By W. W. Chaplin
International News Service Staff Writer

Great Britain and the Dutch East Indies are prepared to force a military showdown on the basis of declared war at the first overt act by Japan, it was learned from unimpeachable diplomatic sources last night.

Both countries hope and expect that if the Far East crisis suddenly reaches the state of actual war the United States will speedily move toward active participation, but no such commitment has been given by the State Department.

The Batavia government, it was established, had reached the definite decision not to permit the building up of incidents by Japan which could be used to give an appearance of excuse for concentration of Japanese forces even closer to the Netherlands Archipelago than they are now.

At the first Japanese-inspired incident, it was learned, the government of the Netherlands Indies will act just as the government of Holland did when a German ultimatum was presented May 10. The German officials were immediately handed a formal declaration of war.

This plan is known to Britain through Australian diplomatic channels and from official sources in Singapore and is concurred in.

Both Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands Minister to Washington, and Richard Casey, the Australian Minister, are in almost daily contact with each other and with Secretary of State Hull in connection with the recently renewed threat of Japanese aggression in the Pacific.

Neither of them, because of their official position, is able to speak on the newest war scare except in the privacy of diplomatic sanctums, but from others who are close to the situation a clear picture of probabilities and certainties was obtained.

One of these sources disclosed that neither Loudon nor Casey has been given any commitment concerning America's action if Singapore or the Indies should be attacked by Japan, but no disappointment has been expressed in Dutch or British circles on this score.

"The State Department is keeping us guessing," one official said, "but that's all right with us because it means that Japan is kept guessing too, and so long as the likelihood or even the possibility remains that the United States will join in any military action in the Pacific, Japan will be very cautious in its moves."

From State Department sources it was learned that there is wide belief here that if there is to be a Japanese coup it will not precede an attempted German invasion of England. British sources incline to the belief that the Japanese are not even likely to time an attack in the Pacific to coincide with a German invasion attempt.

One official discussing this point of view explained:

"The Germans have let out intimations of an impending invasion attempt too often. The Japanese will want to be sure not only that the attempt is really to be made but they'll want to know if it has any chance of success.

"If Japan and Germany should strike at the same moment and then Germany should be hurled back across the Channel, Japan would be committed to a war into which the British could throw enormous strength. There is much more likelihood that Japan will wait at least until the Nazi invasion attempt is launched and virtually decided. If by any chance Germany should land a large force in Britain and establish lines for that force—which many consider an almost impossible feat—then Japan might feel justified in striking in the Pacific."

Pending outcome of the present Far Eastern crisis, it was learned both the British dominions and possession in the Pacific and the Dutch East Indies are pressing forward with defense measures at top speed. Britain has tremendous strength in the Pacific, though its naval strength is depleted by demands of the European war, and the Indies are surprisingly well armed though lacking in both naval and air strength. The Indies air force consists of only about 500 planes, of which approximately 400 are American bombers, but they are making every effort to obtain more American bombers and pursuit ships and are negotiating with the British to release a larger percentage of the American export to them.

Scotty Due to Leave Death Valley to Answer Suit for Part of His Fabulous Secret Treasure

(A fabulous character is Death Valley Scotty, who dared the torturous heat of California's Death Valley in search of gold. Special News Service Writer Walter B. Clausen, who has just traveled with him over his old desert trails, now gives you the story in four daily articles, of which this is the first.)

By Walter B. Clausen.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Death Valley, Calif., Feb. 18.—Along the California-Nevada line northeast of Los Angeles lies this desert basin of Death Valley, roughly 100 miles long and 50 miles wide, surrounded by many-hued mountains shimmering in the torturous heat and laden with mineral wealth in quest of which uncounted men have died.

At the northern edge of the valley, just inside habitable country but far from real civilization, there stands anomalously a big castle.

It is the stronghold built by Death Valley Scotty—Walter Scott, the fabulous lone-wolf prospector who, amid long periods of obscurity, has popped intermittently into the public eye ever since he chartered a train from Los Angeles to Chicago for $5,000, just for a lark, in 1905.

Despite his undisclosed but seemingly unlimited wealth, Scotty never has paid an income tax, and his recent public appearances have been in connection with the Government's unavailing efforts to nick him for an assessment.

All Scotty's indications down the years have been that he has sole access to big hidden gold deposits, but when the Government men come around, he waxes genially vague, and the inspectors, not being prospectors, are at a loss to prove anything.

Scotty is not the traditional lean, grizzled prospector with long hair, scraggly mustache and seamed face. He looks more like a well to do rancher, with portly build, a 10-gallon hat, shrewd, business-like eyes and mouth, and a well-fed face that belies his 68 years.

Now he is due for another brush with the complications of the civilized world. On March 25 in Federal Court in Los Angeles there will come up a law suit brought by Julian Gerard, New York investment banker, who asserts that under an agreement in 1907 in which he grub-staked Scotty on an early gold-hunting expedition into this steam-heated Eldorado, he is entitled to 22½ per cent of Scotty's wealth.

Gerard and Scotty first met five years before the agreement in question, in the old Putnam House at Twenty-sixth Street and Fourth Avenue in New York City.

Scotty, who had gone into the desert at the age of 11 as a pony-mail rider, surveyor's helper and borax-mill hand, was then a rider in Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

As Gerard recalls the meeting, Will Rogers also was present. Scotty turned the conversation to mining. He said that he had discovered some rich gold deposits out West, and showed them half a dozen pieces of the ore. He asked Gerard to grub-stake him, so he could go back and exploit the deposits.

Gerard gave him about $500 and Scotty went West, and, in May, 1902, sallied into the desert, prospecting.

In July, 1902, three months after he had started into the desert, Scotty sent a letter—one of many filed in the suit—out to Gerard:

"Well, old man, I have been working the mine alone, and she is all right, and I am burnt up fearful. Let me tell you the heat is terrible. For ten straight days it has been 140 in the shade. I am black as a Nigger.

"I worked quite a bit on it, and have a lead about 30 inches. On one side granite hard as hell, and the other side is hard rock coated with yellow clay.

"I have not had an assay, but have about a ton of ore that will average over $1 a pound, and three tons that will go to $700 a ton easy, but at present I am badly handicapped, bad water and the heat has got me all to the bad . . .

"I have lost all my jacks (jackasses) . . . died of starvation and bad water . . ."

Scotty plugged along in the desert for a year. In the summer of 1903 he wrote back:

"Well, old man, I got to Barstow, the 25th, and made the last 116 miles without water . . . it wasn't very hot, cooler than I ever saw it . . . it ranged from 128 to 134; all other years it was 140 to 145 . . . "

Picturesque reports like this filtered back for several years as Scotty prowled the desert for gold.

In 1907, he and Gerard made a new agreement, and it is on this that the banker is suing. Scotty contends that in 1927 he gave Gerard formal notice that he was canceling the agreement, and that Gerard filed no claims within the next four yeras, thereby rendering the agreement void.

(Tomorrow: How Scotty thwarted would-be poachers on his treasure trove.)

Strike Halts Work on Navy Mosquito Boats

Philadelphia, Feb. 18. (AP).—A plant building Diesel engines for the Navy's mosquito boats was shut down today because of a strike.

The walkout at the National Supply Company was called by the International Association of Machinists, A. F. L., which claims to represent a majority of the 256 employes.

The union is asking increased wages and an election to determine a bargaining agent.

Two Walkouts on Coast

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 18 (AP).—A. F. of L. unions called a strike today at boat-building and repair plants of the Campbell Machine Co. and the San Diego Marine Construction Co., both engaged in converting tuna boats into minesweepers for the Navy.

(Pickets took places around the plants and operations suspended. Approximately 175 men went out at Campbell's and 125 at the other company.

The labor dispute involved wage and working-condition demands of the unions.

Allis-Chalmers Disagreement

Milwaukee, Feb. 18. (AP).—The management of the strikebound Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. issued a statement tonight declaring that it and the striking C. I. O. plant local disagreed on interpretation of a clause proposed at a Washington conference with defense leaders last week as a means of immediately reopening the plant.

The company asserted that the United States Automobile Workers local "insisted that the Washington agreement be interpreted as a 'maintenance of membership agreement' which would make employes who now belong to the union subject to discipline or discharge if they failed to pay their dues."

The company stated that Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, had assured them by telephone from Washington that the clause was not subject to such interpretation.

Richard T. Frankensteen, member of the union's international executive board, said the union had offered to allow an impartial referee to interpret the clause but that the company had refused.

Ford Employes Ask Election

Detroit, Feb. 18 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers Union (C. I. O.) announced today it had petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for an election to determine the sole bargaining agency for the Ford Motor Co.'s Dearborn and Highland Park (Mich.) plants. The U. A. W.-C. I. O. previously had petitioned for a similar election to determine the sole bargaining agency for employes of Ford's Lincoln plant here.

Greeks Claim New Advances In Albania

Athens, Greece, Feb. 18 (AP).—Greek shock troops advanced along the central Albanian battle sector today, occupying Italian fortified positions nearly a mile high in two areas, a government spokesman announced tonight.

Despite "desperate efforts," he added, the Italians were nowhere able to "gain an inch of ground."

The spokesman declared the Italian command persisted in ordering counterattacks "with a complete disregard of the bloodshed which they entailed."

The spokesman cited a single Italian company as an example of recent heavy Fascist losses: Two officers were killed, he said, two taken prisoner and 140 men killed or wounded, with only 25 escaping.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment, by Small Majority, Favors Government Lotteries for Defense Costs

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 18.—Last autumn in the State of Massachusetts 30 out of 40 Senatorial districts voted favorably in a referendum to establish State-sponsored lotteries to pay the cost of old age pensions and other governmental items.

In many parts of the country from time to time there has also been discussion of governmental-sponsored lotteries for other purposes, such as national defense. These discussions have stirred up much heat, with church leaders opposing lotteries on the ground that they encourage gambling, while others argue that since the country ordinarily spends many millions in foreign lotteries, such as the Irish sweepstakes, this money might better be diverted to some useful domestic purpose.

To determine where public opinion stands on the Government-sponsored lottery controversy, the Institute has just completed a series of surveys throughout the country.

Favored for Defense Cost

The studies find that lotteries to help pay the cost of national defense are approved by a majority—though not a large one—while sentiment is about evenly split on lotteries to cover old age pension costs.

The questions and replies in the survey are as follows:

"Would you favor lotteries in this country run by the Federal Government to help pay some of the cost of national defense?"

Yes	51%
No	38
No opinion	11

"Would you favor lotteries in your States run by the State government to help pay the cost of old age pensions?"

Yes	45%
No	41
No opinion	14

The Massachusetts referendum, in which approximately 71 per cent in 30 districts voted in favor of Government lotteries, stirred considerable discussion in the State, although most observers feel that a lottery bill will not get far in the Legislature.

Northeast Favors Lotteries

The lottery idea is more popular in the New England and Middle Atlantic States than anywhere else in the country, according to today's survey results. That area is, in fact, the only section of the country where voters approve the old age pension lottery, and it also shows a much higher vote than other sections in favor of the defense lottery suggestion.

LOTTERIES FOR OLD AGE PENSIONS?

	Yes	No	No Opinion
New England & Middle Atlantic States	59%	31%	10%
East Central	40	44	16
West Central	36	51	13
South	31	51	18
Far West	43	43	14

LOTTERIES FOR DEFENSE?

	Yes	No	No Opinion
New England & Middle Atlantic States	60%	30%	10%
East Central	50	39	11
West Central	30	46	15
South	45	40	15
Far West	47	43	10

The study revealed an interesting difference of opinion between the sexes. A much larger proportion of men than of women were found in favor of the lottery scheme. Many of the women polled said they felt that no part of the family pay envelope should be wasted on lottery gambling."

The lottery-for-defense idea is considerably more popular among Catholics than among Protestants or non-church members. Catholics are 64 per cent in favor, Protestants only 45 per cent, and non-church members 54 per cent.

175th Md. Infantry Moves Into Meade

By Marshall Andrews

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Feb. 18.—Maryland's 175th Infantry, first of the Twenty-ninth Division's four Infantry regiments slated to arrive in camp this week, moved in by truck today to find muddy Fort Meade frozen solid and a keen wind blowing up a miniature sandstorm.

The regiment, coming in by truck from Baltimore throughout the day, took up residence in new unpainted barracks on the left of the Fifty-eighth Brigade area. It will be joined by the 115th Infantry, which is made up of companies from the counties of Maryland, next Friday.

Advance elements of the division's three artillery regiments came in today, following those of the 116th and 176th Infantry of Virginia, which arrived yesterday. They will prepare barracks and mess halls for their regiments. The Virginia Infantry will move in tomorrow and Thursday and all three artillery regiments, the 110th, of Maryland; the 111th, of Virginia, and the 176th, of Pennsylvania, will be in Thursday also.

It was learned today that Capt. Ward W. Caddington, of Silver Spring, Md., commanding the Service Company, is one of five officers who will be detailed to Fort Benning, Ga., to take a two-month battalion commanders' course starting February 25. Although promotion to rank of major does not necessarily accompany detail to the school, the detail usually is taken to indicate such promotion is in prospect.

An advance detachment of 33 officers and men of the newly formed 105th Antitank Battalion, composed of companies formerly of the Twenty-eighth Division, Pennsylvania National Guard, came in today to prepare for arrival of the battalion tomorrow and Thursday. The battalion, commanded by Lieut. Col. C. L. Supplee, of Lancaster, Pa., will be housed in tents until its cantonment, adjoining that of the Twenty-ninth Division, is completed, probably in mid-March. It is composed of former infantry, cavalry, artillery and quartermaster units and will be under direct command of headquarters of the First Army.

Capt. Tazewell F. Thompson, of Norfolk, Va., adjutant of the Fifty-fourth Artillery Brigade, has been reinstated to duty on appeal from the decision of a medical examining board. He will resume his place in the brigade at once.

At the Recruit Reception Center, where selectees from the District, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania are outfitted and processed, it was learned that induction stations in the area are so far behind schedule that the center here may be overtaxed before the current induction period is ended March 7. Under the schedule, some 7,000 men were to have been inducted between February 5 and March 7, at least 3,500 of them by today. So far, only 1,800 have passed through the local center.

She agrees with all those interviewed that men inducted into the service are of "the highest type."

Miss Pierce was seconded by Miss Vanda Hermann, 21, of 5407 Nberaska Avenue Northwest, a secretary in the Coast Guard Service office.

"The men in the service I know are all a very decent bunch of fellows," she said. "It's only fair to give them a chance to meet some nice girls."

Two girls in Civil Service—Miss Evelyn Briscoe, of 5831 Sherier Place Northwest, and Miss Kay Wilson, of 1606 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, both admit they are susceptible to uniforms and are willing to do their part to "help National defense."

Miss Briscoe, who is from Oklahoma, has never had a date with a service man and thinks "it might be interesting." Asked whether she knew any men in the Army, Miss Wilson only smiled.

Miss Marion Zeliff, 19-year-old General Accounting Office employe, of 4203 Arkansas Avenue Northwest, thinks attending some of the weekly dances for selectees will be "fun."

She believes that a uniform "adds a lot to a man," and, besides, "soldiers should have fun, too." She plans to volunteer as a "dancee" as soon as registrations are accepted.

Meanwhile, Archie Edwards, Civil Service executive who heads the Federal employes committee, reported that he had received several phone calls during the day from Government girls who had read The Post's story yesterday and wanted to register for the dances.

Final plans for the dances and for registering the Government girls will be completed at a meeting of all defense recreation committees Friday afternoon in the District Building, it was announced by Hugo Wolter, executive secretary of the general recreation committee.

$25,000 Is Asked To Buy Statue Of Washington

The Budget Bureau yesterday asked Congress to appropriate $25,000 for the purchase of a statue of George Washington to be erected on the Capitol grounds and $3,000 for the removal of the lonely figure of John Marshall.

Under an act of the last Congress David Lynn, Capitol architect, was authorized to move the Marshall statue from the western foot of the Capitol grounds to the Supreme Court tract.

The Washington statue was executed by J. Q. A. Ward.

Aid Bill Would Put U. S. in War, Senate Told

privately claimed for this amendment than for any other modification effort.

A growing Senate Republican swing to the measure promised to divide the Senate G. O. P. on the final vote. Republican bill supporters counted a minimum of eight and a possible 16 on their side of the aisle in potential support. At least seven of these are now listed "doubtful."

Leading for the opposition, Senator Clark told the Senate the bill would "implement and put in motion processes almost certain to result in war." In slow, deliberate delivery, the Missouri Democrat charged the measure would "denude" American defenses, vest "autocratic powers" in the President and impair "the safety and perpetuity of our institutions."

Risk-All Attitude Assailed

Senator Vandenberg followed with a denunciation of what he termed a "risk-all attitude toward British aid," though he favored productive aid within "middle ground" limits. Vandenberg said the bill would make President Roosevelt "power politician No. 1 of the world" and make the White House war headquarters. He called the measure "a potential and needless threat to the peace and security of the United States."

The Clark and Vandenberg speeches were expected to last through the day, but when no debate developed to prolong them, opposition leaders sent in Nye.

Nye charged an effort by "some Americans of 1941" toward a permanent alliance with Great Britain "to dominate and police all the peoples of the world." He charged the bill authorized President "to make an immediate alliance with any power upon this earth that he alone may choose as an ally, give them our purse, our machinery of defense . . ." He asked if the President was considering such "a permanent order with Great Britain."

An attack by Nye on Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's testimony that Britain's buying power in this country is nearing exhaustion launched the only spirited debate of the day.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley came to Morgenthau's defense. Joining in the long discussion were Senators Taft (Republican), of Ohio; Tydings, of Maryland; Wheeler, of Montana; Clark, of Missouri, and Bone, of Washington (Democrats).

Morgenthau Criticized

Senator Taft charged a willingness by Morgenthau "to take any figures the British give him." He said adequate British resources exist at this time to continue arms purchases.

Barkley disputed this, saying no British contracts have been let since the first of the year because England has run out of dollar credits.

Clark insisted Britain could produce huge dollar resources from other parts of the world and that it is nw paying cash in the dominions.

Barkley argued that much of Britain's resources were tied up in things that couldn't be converted, such as a street car line in Venezuela.

Wheeler remarked that the United States was proposing "to give Britain better treatment than her own dominins."

Nye agreed that the bill proposes to "outstrip every dominion and colony in the British empire" in aiding England.

Clark earlier had charged that this Government does not want to force the Brtish branch of the Astor family to liquidate its New York holdings, but will force American taxpayers to sell their holdings to finance the program.

Barkley hotly denied this, saying it was purely a question of how much money Britain had in this country, and how much their securities would bring when forced on the market.

Proponents to Speak Today

Senator Nye will conclude his speech today, and the balance of the day will be turned over to proponents of the bill, with Senators Bailey, of North Carolina, and Connally, of Texas (Democrats), leading off.

First speaker of the opposition, Senator Clark, told the Senate the bill will completely reverse the foreign policy this Nation has followed since the time of Washington and carry America to "the very brink of war."

It was a gamble, he said, "upon the one card of a complete British victory," and "not a defense bill at all, but a war bill." He said it was tantamount to "guaranteeing a military victory by one belligerent over another."

"We all know," Clark said, "that that is equivalent to a declaration of a state of war ourselves and must be followed up by sending our ships, our warships, our planes and our guns and ultimately our men. Once committed, we cannot turn aside."

Vandenberg Agrees

Senator Vandenberg agreed there was an "approaching crisis" for England but said if America stops short of war "there is precious little in this bill for Britain save loans or gifts—and those could be provided in a single sentence amendment to the neutrality act and I will support it."

While favoring loans and gifts to England, Vandenberg said he "simply cannot accept the novel theory that our safety and our peace and happiness require of us that we shall make our White House the war capital of half the world or more, and our President the No. 1 power politician of the world."

He said Congress, through the bill, would make the President more powerful than Jove "with his monopoly of lightning bolts" on Mount Olympus. Congress, in return, merely humbly requests "that you tell us once every 90 days what is going on," continued Vandenberg. He said the time might come when the President would report: "Gentlemen, you may not know it but you are at war."

Formula for Suicide

"It is the sort of formula by which the French Chamber of Deputies and the Italian Chamber of Deputies and the German Reichstag committed suicide," he said. "It is not the formula of Britain herself or any of her dominions. Indeed, it is repugnant to every ideal for which we presumably are being mobilized."

Both Vandenberg and Nye alluded to Willkie's testimony for hte bill. Nye called Willkie "that great expert on European affairs." Vandenberg called the 1940 Republican nominee "one of our very able clipper ambassadors."

Senator Johnson earlier filed his six-page minority report declaring the bill's "ultimate effect, if not its declared purpose, will be to take us into war." He said the majority case was built on the theory that "Britain is fighting our war" and this he denied.

"It is a pure grant of power to the President to do as he pleases with any foreign nation, for any purpose, and on any terms he may see fit, to make available to any nation or nations, any part, or the whole, of the military or naval power of the United States," said the minority statement.

"It would authorize him (the President) to say what nations shall receive, and for any reasons at all to open to them our military and naval equipment, and our resources, and it is perfectly obvious that once commitments have been made, our men will have to guarantee the favored nation and underwrite its war."

Johnson asserted there is no need now for additional aid to Britain, adding: "Britain is receiving—and will continue to receive—all aid necessary that can with a due regard to our safety be accorded."

Washingtonians Warned About Bogus $10 Bills

Washingtonians have become the mark for counterfeiters who are passing off a quantity of bogus $10 bills, the United States Secret Service revealed yesterday.

The Capital is the only city in the country in which this particular fictitious note is appearing, although another fake $10 bill with a different back plate has also been passed recently in Baltimore, it was reported.

The counterfeit Federal Reserve note, bearing Alexander Hamilton's portrait, can be identified by the following signs the Secret Service said: In Hamilton's picture the right eye is misshapen; white lines in the coat are too prominent; the cross-ruled lines which form the portrait background are uneven and flecked with tiny white spots.

U. S. Tightens Rule On Base Visitors

The State Department gave notice yesterday that at least ten days would be required in the future for Americans to obtain passports to visit seven of the British possessions where United States naval and air bases are being established.

No reason was given but it indicated that a closer investigation would be made of persons desiring to visit areas near the defense bases.

The possessions affected are Newfoundland, Bermuda, Jamaica, Antigua, Santa Lucia, Trinidad and British Guiana.

Harriman Named Defense Expediter

Commerce Secretary had said before the House Banking Committee:

"We're in the war; at least we're nearly in the war. We're preparing for it; when you do that, you've got to throw money away."

Immediately after making the remark Jones turned to the committee's official stenographer and asked that it be stricken from the record. He made no such request, however, to newspaper reporters who were present.

Such statements are mere words and provoke endless debate, the President said, adding that he did not mean his remarks to apply particularly to Jones, but to the press or anyone else who expressed themselves similarly.

Harriman, a 49-year-old financier, who, with his brother, inherited approximately $100,000,000, is chairman of the Business Advisory Council nad as such is considered a leading spokesman of business in the Capital.

Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday that the decision to send him to London was taken after Harry L. Hopkins submitted his report on conditions there.

The President said that Harriman would leave when arrangements to administer the lend-lease bill have been made. He indicated that Harriman would be the London representative of the organization set up to administer the aid-Britain program.

When a reporter asked what relationship Harriman would bear to the United States Embassy in London and whether Harriman would be his personal representative, the President said he did not know and didn't give a — you know.

A table of American and British orders and British needs is now being drawn up, the President said.

The table, which he called an armament flow sheet, would be divided into double columns, Mr. Roosevelt said.

One column would show what the United States has on order for the Army and Navy, divided into deliveries expected in 1941 and those expected in 1942.

Another column will show what the British have already ordered subdividing it into 1941 and 1942 deliveries.

A third column, the President continued, will show what orders the United States plans to place under regular, supplemental and deficiency appropriation bills either now before Congress or shortly to be sent there. This column would also be subdivided into 1941 and 1942 deliveries.

The fourth column would show British needs that are not on order, also for 1941 and 1942.

It is this final column, Mr. Roosevelt said, which involves the lend-lease bill.

The necessary priorities can be worked out from this table, he said.

Discussing priorities, the President said he wanted to make it plain that you cannot simply list articles needed in numerical order. In many cases, he said, there are five or six articles that belong in the first priority class.

His attention on speed in aiding Britain, the President called for greater production of armaments, mentioning specifically destroyers and airplanes.

He revealed that he had advised the Navy to cut in half its original delivery schedule for destroyers, which was based on 20 months' construction time. The President said he had recalled to naval officers that in the World War he had caused destroyers to be turned out in nine or ten months.

As a result of his advice, the Navy cut the time table for destroyers by half, but there is still room for improvement, the President said.

The President would not comment on published reports that aircraft production has now reached 1,000 a month, but said still greater production should be the goal.

Earlier in the day the President conferred with Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and with Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, who returned recently after spending five months as a military observer in England.

Admiral Stark, in talking with reporters, left open the possibility that world developments might result in transferring more warships to Great Britain.

Admiral Ghormley said he did not submit a report to the President.

Note Easy Steps in Pictures . . .

Be Sure to get quick-acting BAYER Aspirin

2. For sore throat from cold, dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water and gargle. Pain, rawness are eased in a remarkably short time.
3. Check temperature. If you have a fever and temperature does not go down—if throat pain is not quickly relieved, call your doctor.

Sore throat from colds eased in a hurry! No strong medicines to upset system.

Don't wait if you even suspect you are catching a cold. At the first sign, faithfully follow the directions in the pictures above—the simplest and among the most effective methods known to modern science.

See Your Doctor. Even though he may wholeheartedly approve using Bayer Aspirin to relieve painful symptoms, you should not fail to see your family physician, because many colds may lead to serious consequences. Literally millions have adopted it.

Try it. You will say it is unequalled, we are sure. When you buy, however, be sure you get the fast-acting Bayer product you want.

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN STARTS TO WORK SO FAST

Drop genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet in water. Almost instantly it starts to disintegrate—is ready to go to work. Make this test, and see for yourself why Bayer Aspirin acts so quickly!

Antique Era Reflected In 'Strawberry Blonde'

Old Songs Strike Keynote of Period Picture; 'Twelfth Night' Will Be Monday, March 10; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IF YOU WERE RIDING A BICYCLE through Central Park in New York, Washington Park in Chicago, or Golden Gate Park in San Francisco, back about the turn of the century, you probably heard such hit songs of the period as "The Band Played On," "Bedelia," "On A Sunday Afternoon" and "When You Were Sweet Sixteen" wafted through the side doors of more than one "Ladies' Entrance" saloon and no doubt had opportunity to observe that the "hot sports" lined up in front of the corner drug store and Nick's barber shop were a fine pack of "cards."

BELL

Not that "Strawberry Blonde" has too much to do with bicycles, ambisextrous barrooms and the like, but those old songs pitch practically the key in which the whole picture is played. They are the theme threnodies of an ample adventure in nostalgia that will bowl the old-timers of the theater and the galloping years right out of their pews and presumably leave the jive-and-jitterbug generation as cold as yesterday's chill north winds. There are times when it pays to have been born 'way back yonder. The coming of such an item as "Strawberry Blonde," opening Friday on the screen at the Earle, marks one of them.

Based on James Hagan's stage play of "One Sunday Afternoon," first picturized by Paramount in 1933, with Gary Cooper, Frances Fuller, Fay Wray and Neil Hamilton in the pivotal roles, "Strawberry Blonde" does not pretend to adhere to the original movement of the story, except in the vaguest of fashions. It tells the tale, to be sure, by the familiar flashback method and registers its salient points, but it is primarily notable for the uncanny skill with which James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hyworth, Alan Hale and Jack Carson manage to catch the spirit and the tempo of an era that was not as naughty as it was nice as a time in which to live.

If you are old enough, you will love "Strawberry Blonde" as a recrudescence of your vanishing youth. If you are too young, it may mean nothing more than a bit of superfluous evidence that times aren't what they used to be. That's an horrendous catastrophe or a happy circumstance, depending almost wholly upon your personal calendar.

It is our old friend Elmer Kenyon, erstwhile professor of literature and the drama at Carnegie Tech, which is in Pittsburgh, who finally brings order out of comparative chaos. The eminent Mr. Kenyon shortly will be making his first pilgrimage to Washington in several seasons in the interests of the Theater Guild-Gilbert Miller production of "Twelfth Night," co-starring Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans—although the Guild never calls it "starring." Nobody seems to have known, up to now, precisely when "Twelfth Night" will get here. Mr. Kenyon now says it will get here to open a week's engagement at the National on Monday, March 10.

With other circuit expansions going on almost continuously in the Washington territory, the Lichtman theater chain is not standing still, either. In addition to taking over the Gem Theater, in Petersburg, Va., the Lichtman enterprises also have new theater projects afoot in Portsmouth and Newport News, Va., and out Bennings way, ferninst the District. The Gem brings the circuit total up to 23 houses. The new ones will bring it to 26 by June.

The schedule upon which the 12 local acting groups participating in the 1941 D. C. One-Act Play Tournament, beginning February 27 in Roosevelt High School Auditorium, will appear has been formulated by the committee in charge, as follows: February 27, the FBI Recreation Association Theater Group, the St. Paul's Players and the Buchanan PTA Drama Club; March 1, The Masquers of Roosevelt Community Center, the Pierce Hall Players and the Pepconians; March 4, the Falls Church Community Theater, Players Club of Central Community Center and the Census Bureau Dramatic Club; March 6, The Interior Players, Troupers of East Washington Community Center and the Covenant-Fellowship Dramatic Club. The survivors will compete in the finals on Saturday night, March 8.

With "Tobacco Road" booming along at the National on its farewell tour—with extra performances added for Friday afternoon and Sunday afternoon and night to accomodate the crowds—it is interesting to hark back, as the saying goes, to the first cast that supported Henry Hull in the back-country perennial on the same stage in 1936. Mary Servoss played Ada, the wife; Donald Barry, Dude; Leon Ames, Lov; Priscilla Knowles, Sister Bessie; Haila Stoddard, Pearl; Pauline Drake, Ellie May; Halleen Hall, Grandma Lester, that hapless corpse of the copse; Fiske O'Hara, the banker, and Dick Lee, Henry Peabody. It is interesting to hark back because Haila Stoddard now is Mrs. Jack Kirkland, wife of the author-producer of the play, and Leon Ames it was who so recently scored such an emphatic personal hit with Elliott Nugent in "The Male Animal." Mr. Ames, it will be recalled, appeared in the role of Joe Ferguson, the football hero, who never grew up beyond the level of the goal posts.

Come-to-Think-of-It Note

The Title Probably Explains the Look in Her Eyes

CESAR ROMERO AND VIRGINIA GILMORE

as they appear in the principal roles in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Tall, Dark and Handsome," opening Thursday on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Supplementing their activities will be found the comic talents of Milton Berle, Charlotte Greenwood, Frank Jenks, Barnett Parker and a cast of popular players

Alex Woollcott Plays Himself in Comedy Hit

"THE MAN WHO CAME TO DINNER." With Alexander Woollcott to play none other than his thinly disguised self, the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman comedy arrives at the National Theater Monday evening. Suppporting the celebrated "Town Crier" and quondam critic is an exceptional group of noted players recruited from the several companies which have played the hit: Edith Atwater, of the original cast; Doris Nolan and Erik Rhodes from the films; Teddy Hart, from musical comedy; Minnie Dupree, of a happy past; Joe E. Marks, Mrs. Priestly Morrison, Walter Coy, Janet Fox and Arthur Griffin, and many others. The comedy concerns the havoc wrought in a Midwestern household when a famed wit and raconteur slips on the ice as he leaves a dinner party and is forced to return to recuperate. Matiness Wednesday and Saturday.

Capitol

"TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME." Satirizing the gangster period of 1928 in Chicago, this new film costars Cesar Romero and Charlotte Greenwood. For its kidding purposes the story involves a little girl from the country who mixes with the "mob" by mistake; an impressionable brother who wants to be a gangster, and innumerable machine gunnings. Milton Berle, Virginia Gilmore and Stanley Clements are the chief supporting players. Henry Busse's orchestra tops the stage bill and have promised their rare rendering of "Hot Lips." Eunice Healey, Ginger Harmon, Rosss Wyse, jr., and June Mann are other performers on the variety billl. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"STRAWBERRY BLONDE." James Cagney and Olivia de Havilland play this new screen version of the stage comedy, "One Sunday Afternoon." Cagney is the dentist who falls in love with an exotic "strawberry blonde," but loses her to the local lad who made good. He marries Miss de Havilland on the rebound, meeets his former flame, but is rescued by his smart wife. Nita Hayworth has the title role and Jack Carson, Alan Hale, George Tobias and Una O'Conner are others in the cast. Minevitch's original Harmonica Rascals headline the stage revue, which further includes the Naitto Troupe, ? Hoo Shee! and a special overture, "The Band Played On" and "Meet Me in St. Louis," sung by Eileen Ritter and Gene Archer. Opens Friday morning.

Palace

"THE PHILADELPHIA STORY." Katharine Hepburn continues in the most sparkling success of her meteoric career for a third week on the Palace screen. With her in this adaptation of the Philip Barry play are Cary Grant, James Stewart, Ruth Hussey, Roland Young, Virginia Weidler and John Howard. "More About Nostradamus" also continues as the short subject.

RKO-Keith's

"BACK STREET." Margaret Sullavan and Charles Boyer have the pivotal parts in this Fannie Hurst story of the other woman in a successful married man's life. Others in the film, continuing into its third week on Fifteenth Street, include Richard Carlson, Tim Holt and Frank McHugh.

Metropolitan

"THIS THING CALLED LOVE." Marital mixups involving Melvyn Douglas and Rosalind Russell form the comedy situations in this film which already has played a week at the Earle. A trick marriage contract begins the business. Binnie Barnes, Allyn Joslyn, Gloria Dickson, Lee J. Cobb and Gloria Holden are other players. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"MAISIE WAS A LADY." Latest in the showgirl's series of adventures returns to F Street after a run at the Capitol. Ann Sothern continues as soft-hearted, slick-tongued Maisie with Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan, Edward Ashley, Paul Cavanaugh and Joan Perry as other leading characters. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"NIGHT TRAIN." Surprise thriller of the year, this British-made production continues for a second week on the Little screen. Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison and Paul von Hernreid havethe pivotal parts in a story which finds British and Nazi secret agents fighting for the services of a great Czech chemist.

Trans-Lux

"THE SCILLY ISLES." Those relics of fabled Lyonesse which the traveler used to sight as the Plymouth-bound steamers neared the Bishop's Light are captured by the new week's travelogue on the newsreel center's screen. Further short subjects depict parades and graduation ceremonies at West Point and "Hunting on Top of the World"—the two poles to be specific. "The Mouse Trappers" is the color cartoon. Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"FADS AND FANCIES." Patricia Perry is the headline beauty for the burlesque production opening Sunday afternoon. "Slats" Taylor wil handle the comedy assignments. Benny Moore and Armane Parker also are featured. Margie Hart is headlining the current bill continuing through Saturday's midnight performance.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 18 (INS).—The happiest lad in our town is Jack Oakie, who stands a chance of winning the Golden Oscar for the best supporting performance of the year. A year ago Jack was finding it tough sledding. Then came his caricature of Mussolini in "The Great Dictator" and his performance in "Tin Pan Alley." Furthermore, Jack who had been a play boy and had taken his job lightly, has suddenly buckled down and can be counted on to be at the studio on the dot without any A. W. O. L.

PARSONS

Studios which had shied away from the fun-loving Oakie, even though he has always been a good actor, began to try to date him for a movie. Well, to get down to brass tacks, George M. Cohan's old stage success, "Song and Dance Man," has been taken out of its wrappings and will be remade for Senor Oakie.

Everyone who knows June Clyde is happy for her that she has been given the second lead in the Irene Dunne-Gregory LaCava picture, "Unfinished Business," at Universal. June has lived in England with her husband, Thornton Freeland, well-known director, for some years and the war brought them back home to Hollywood, where their baby was born on American soil.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Don't be surprised if H. B. Warner, well-known actor, and Mrs. Miller, of Pasadena, announce their marriage in a few days; hope it isn't true Grace Hayes and her bridegroom, Newell Chase, are having trouble; the Warner Studio Club party at the Biltmore was such fun; Bette Davis danced and danced with her bridegroom, Arthur Farnsworth, while Bill Orr and Gene Tierney were an attractive twosome. They were with Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan. At Jack Warner's table were Marlene Dietrich, Reginal Gardiner, Jesse Lasky, Edmund Goulding and many others.

Warning to the fish in Mexican waters — Henry Fonda and John Ford are headed in that direction; the Danny Dankers gave one of the nicest small parties of the year in honor of their house guests, the Carroll Doyles; Don Ameches, who had to drive to the Valley (and it wasn't any fun in the rain) were among the last to leave.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 18.

It used to be leg art that got our young beauties in the magazines. And sweaters. Now it's don't think it's the studios who are trying to keep those pictures out of circulation, 'cause they send 'em in. Instead of Mrs. Russell being hurt at the pictures of her young daughter, Jane, who's got the lead in "The Outlaw," she's delighted with all the publicity. But Elyse Knox out-Turners Lana. Patti McCarthy isn't bad, either. But Veronica Lake, the Blonde beauty who's so good in "I Wanted Wings" and who tested for the part in a sweater, now can't even pose in one, nor in a bathing suit. Studio says it's undignified.

HOPPER

Now that our academy nominations are in, it's interesting to note that out of ten pictures up for the award, half are independent productions. As to the other awards, I may be all wet, but I believe the voting will go thus: I think Hepburn will get our Oscar for the best actress; and Jimmy Stewart in "Philadelphia Story" for best actor. They gave swell performances, but my vote went to Martha Scott.

Wonder why Producer Gene Towne is having such a time finding a girl to play the lead in 'How to Meet a Man." It's one of the best stories of the year. And the title opens up an endless vista.

Kathleen Howard, former head of Harper's Bazaar and one of the nicest women I know, plays meanies so well that she was cast as another one of those in "Blossoms in the Dust." She's so horrible she drives Marsha Hunt to commit suicide.

Veda Buckland landed the nurse's role with Joan Crawford in "A Woman's Face." Did prohibition kill the art of eating and drinking? I haven't heard anyone complain of gout in 20 years, have you? Or was the prohibition liquor so powerful it killed 'em off before they had time to develop gout? . . .

Dick Foran and millionaire playboy Bob Oliver are both vying for the affections of Jayne Larkin. While Bobby Stack and Cobina Wright, jr., are still being talked about, it's Socialite Penny Hales he sees oftenest.

Now that Dennis Morgan is sharing a house with Eddie Norris, it looks as though he and his wife have come to the parting of the ways.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 18.

TWO MATCH BOXES: Three simple lines are written on the face of each—"Ein Reich, Ein Volk, Ein Fuehrer" . . . I took them from the waiting room in the airport at Vienna, as a conscience-appeaser for having spent 10 cents in Germany. But I had been unable to resist the temptation—to spend that dime for a stamp and a postcard which ultimately was received by the addressee . . . That card, with its Nazi postmark, was sent to Walter Winchell. The message was: "Having Wonderful Time. Wish you were here."

LYONS

AN UNCASHED CHECK: It was drawn to my order, in the sum of $14.28, by Walter Duranty, in settlement of a bet. Duranty, at that time, was the Times' Moscow correspondent, and always wagered odd sums of American money—because they represented even figures in rubles . . . Two years ago, at a West Fifty-second Street bar, he bet me that before May, 1940, Henry Luce would own the New York Herald Tribune . . . Duranty sent the check from Bucharest on May 23, 1940. "I hope this check will reach you some day," he wrote, "and that I'll see you again soon. But if Italy comes into the war, I don't see how a British subject can easily get himself westwards. Still stands the Old Lord Warden, are Dover's cliffs still white?—i. e., the Stork, Voison's. Best regards."

A CARTOON: It was sketched by Alan Dunn, and shows the proprietor of a Greek restaurant asking a phone caller: "'A' as in Argyrokastron?" . . . I saved it because it reminded me of the Magyar Legiforgalmi office in Budapest, where a ruddy-faced young lady telephoned our plane reservations for the flight across the Alps, and I heard her spell our name: 'LYONS—'L,' as in Ladislaus; 'Y,' as in Ypsilon; 'O,' as in Omega; 'N,' as in Napoleon; 'S,' as in Stanislaus—that's right . . . 'LYONS.'"

A RADIOGRAM: Ernest Hemingway sent it from Havana, and we received it abroad the S. S. Manhattan in the Panama Canal . . . We had arranged to meet Hemingway at the pier in Havana, but a storm delayed our arrival in port for more than six hours. The radiogram said: "Sorry to have missed you and Sylvia at the pier. Waited there, then paged all the tearoms in town, because I know you don't drink" . . . We had paged . . . all the barrooms in town, because we know that Hemingway does.

TWO BLUE CARDS: They mark the resumption of a friendship with Abel Green, editor of Variety—a friendship which, for some silly reason, had been disrupted a few years earlier . . . We had arrived in Paris coincident with the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth. For five hours I was shuttled between governmental bureaus seeking two permits to witness the wecloming parade—without avail. My Application plus three photographs of myself should have ben submitted six weeks earlier, they assured me—so that Scotland Yard and the Paris police would have been able to check up on me. But now it was too late . . . And so we returned to our hotel, to find the two blue permits from the Prefecture de Police for the "Visite de Leurs Majestes Britanniques" . . . "Welcome to Pairs. Thought you might want these," was the accompanying note. "Abel Green."

A CARD: It is framed next to a companion piece, which is a letter written by Quentin Reynolds on July 13, 1936, addressed to Dr. Ernest Hanfstaengl, Wilhelmstrasse, Berlin. It read: "This will introduce Leonard Lyons, and I know, in line with your usual courteous treatment of foreign correspondents, you will receive him and facilitate things for him. As for you, Putzy, I may be seeing you in a couple of weeks, and trust we may hoist many a bowla at the Taverne" . . . The card, addressed to Reynolds in New York while he was ducking German bombs in London, was mailed from Internment Camp R, Ottawa, Canada. The message was: "Will you please get in touch with me, and oblige—Prisoner of War No. 3026—Ernst Hanfstaengl."

The Blackfriars Guild Offers Premiere of 'Fog Over Mars'.

By Richard L. Coe

Peace, that goddess whom an unworthy world is fast making into a draggle-tailed guttersnipe, is the subject of Father Urban Nagle's latest play, "Fog Over Mars." The Washington Chapter of the Blackfriars' Guild presented it here for the first time last night in St. Paul's Auditorium, 1421 V Street, where it will be repeated tonight and tomorrow evening at 8:30.

It would be cheering to say that "Fog Over Mars" is a successful effort to glorify an ideal going so quickly into disrepute. But the director-general of the national order of Blackfriars has truly befogged his war on Mars by trying to do too much. He has fashioned it in blank verse, that form Maxwell Anderson himself often finds an encumberance, slowing its naturally discursive pace with lines that are too unnatural for even that demanding metier.

Play's Thoughts Confused

A lord of the munitions world is his pivotal figure, thereby introducing a character who has more champions today than in the Years of Disillusionment. Father Nagle paints him completely black. This suave apostle of death chooses promising young men of all nations for key positions in his world-wide organization. But the wife of one of them condemns her husband's powerful boss, decries his system of extracting carte blanche from opposing forces for his factories once wars have been begun, dams the destruction his materials can loose upon the earth and finally leaves him to his own conscience.

The main defect in this story is its confusion of thoughts. The points the author is making are in the play, but they are not keenly drawn; the characters are little more than puppets for what the writer is saying and, to repeat, the blank verse does not yield enough shining passages to justify its usage.

Such a drama—it is in two acts and four scenes—demands much of its cast, certainly far more than last night's players were able to bring to it. Actually they knew their lines and didn't fumble any business. But the demands of the verse bogged them down and the maturity inherent in all the roles simply is not found in inexperienced players.

J. Loren Freund, in the most clearly written of the roles—the munitions king—and Dorothy O'Donnell Freund, as the troubled wife, were the most happily cast of the company. As the tempted idealist, Elliot Dyer had a part far beyond his years. Margaret Murray, Julian Ziez, Hyland Bizot, William Stack, Henry Dominioni, John Kilcoyne, Raymond Maryman, Leon J. Norris and Robert A. Dillon completed the cast.

Although "Fog Over Mars" cannot be classed as a successful experiment, it is an experiment and the industrious Blackfriars are to be congratulated for giving us something new. If only for that reason, their current production is worth their while.

440 D. C. Area Defense Home UnitsApproved

District and Federal officials yesterday projected $1,365,856 in new homes for the Washington area as authorities weighed establishment of trailer camps and semitemporary dormitories to meet a growing crisis in defense housing here.

The new homes will be located in Anacostia and Alexandria, where expansion of Naval armament plants has created centers of low-income housing shortages.

Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody assigned construction of a 200-unit defense housing project, chiefly for Navy Yard workers, to the District Alley Dwelling Authority. John Ihlder, director of the authority, said the new units would be built on a 25-acre site at Anacostia and Ridge Roads Southeast in the area of the authority's Fort Dupont dwellings development.

The new units, Ihlder said, will be in addition to the 3,000 houses either under construction or ready for occupancy under the authority's regular program. He said the cost would approximate $600,000.

At the same time the United States Housing Authority approved base bids of the Martin Bros. Co., of Washington, for two low-rent housing projects for 240 white and colored families in Alexandria.

The white units will be located on a tract bounded by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad line, Oronoco Street, North West Street and Braddock Road. The contract bid was $433,459.

The colored units will cost $332,397 and will be located in an area bounded by Fairfax, Royal, Princess and Pendleton Streets.

Each project, to be started at once, is scheduled for completion within nine months.

Revelation yesterday that trailer camps and dormitories are under consideration for Washington followed a statement by C. F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, covering the Capital's housing situation.

The city, Palmer said, is "faced with a severe housing shortage." He added: "When and if the money is authorized by Congress, the most summary methods will be taken to lick the local problem. If necessary, temporary shelter will be thrown up until more adequate accommodations can be arranged."

A Senate Appropriatoins Subcommittee yesterday recommended a deficiency housing appropriation, part of which would be used for the purchase of large numbers of trailers.

Would Be Used Temporarily

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, subcommittee chairman, said Palmer declared that the trailers would be used to provide temporary housing at industrial centers and new powder plants while permanent housing is being built.

The trailers would be moved in on trains, trucks or on their own wheels, and would be fitted with lights and other home facilities. They could be produced for about $1,000, although they now cost about $4,000 each.

Palmer's statement was timed with release of findings of a WPA housing survey in nearby Virginia and Maryland similar to a report recently made for the District.

Of an estimated total of 238,000 dwelling units in the three areas, the percentage of rental vacancies in habitable condition and with all standard facilities was put at 1.7, or 4,046 units. The average monthly rental of the units is $50, the report said. Palmer forecast for the city a "severe housing shortage particularly in dwelling units renting for less than $45 a month."

Many for Sale Only

The WPA survey showed the percentage of rental vacancies in Maryland and Virginia suburbs to be 1.5 as compared with the District's rate of 1.9.

"This amounts to approximately 900 dwelling units in the suburban areas," the report pointed out. "The overall vacancy rate, 4.6 per cent, is higher than in the District, however, largely because many unoccupied houses are held for sale only.

"Rental vacancy rates of habitable dwellings range from 2.8 per cent in Alexandria and 1.6 per cent in Arlington County, Va., to less than 1 per cent in Montgomery County ,Md.

Average monthly rentals ranged from $75 in Falls Church, Va., and $65 in Montgomery County, to $42.50 in Prince Georges County, Md. The average suburban rental was found to be $50, the same as in the District.

In the combined areas, the report said, "only 3.9 per cent of the habitable rental vacancies were less than $30 and only 17.7 per cent rented for less than $40."

Easier Terms Sought

The defense coordinator has forwarded to Congress through the White House a request for $150,000,000 for defense housing and $6,670,000 for temporary defense homes, including trailers. Palmer has proposed to relieve defense congestion further by liberalization of FHA mortgage insurance terms to make it possible for builders to sell homes without demanding the present 10 per cent down payment.

As a further step toward reducing the problem in Washington, Palmer said, a division of his office is registering "every available room and apartment."

"Even if experinece from the last war had not demonstrated the necessity for desperate measures to prevent the overcrowding which contributes to spread of disease, I would still be aware of necessity for action in the present situation," Palmer declared. "Action is being taken."

As evidence that emergency construction is not hampering the Alley Dwelling Authority's regular program, Ihlder yesterday announced the award of a contract to Victor R. Beauchamp, Inc., Washington, for the Kelly Miller Dwellings, Second, Fifth, W and Oakdale Streets Northwest. The dwellings will house 166 families and cost $628,900.

Star Bribes Horse To Win Confidence

Frances Gifford, the newly-recruited Western heroine who knows no more about horses than she has been told, made a sensible start at her new career.

She arrived for the first time on the set of Paramount's new Hopalong Cassidy picture, "Border Vigilantes," with a handful of sugar cubes filched from the breakfast table.

"Whats that for?" William Boyd asked her.

"Oh, just to get in good with my horse," she replied. "It ought to make me a lot safer in the saddle."

Daughter Testifies Against Father

to address the messages: "Dear Schicklgruber." Hitler's father, who was a Schicklgruber, had his name changed to Hitler when he was 40

In New York a new organization, United Americans, urged that 100,000 Americans cable to Berlin, pointing out that this would cost Hotler $219,000, or the approximate cost of five Messerschmitt warplanes.

United Americans started the ball rolling with this collect message to Ameradio, the Berlin station: "On-the-scene broadcasts of Royal Air Force bombings of Germany most welcome to Americans, especialy of chancellory, Berchtesgaden and Braunhause."

Another message asked for an eyewitness account of Hitler's funeral.

The New York newspaper PM, in a front-page article headed, "How to Get Hunk With Hitler," suggested:

"Hurry, hurry, hurry and get the satisfaction of fighting Hitler at Hitler's expense, before the Nazis tire of paying through the nose and call the offer off."

Here's Howt to Do It

Here's how to do it, the newspaper said: Go to R. C. A., Western Union or ostal Telegraph or telephone R. C. A. Address your cable to Ameradio, Berlin. end a message of not more than 23 words including signature. Don't send less; the more you send the more it costs the Nazis.

Washingtonians may send a message by the same procedure. R. C. A.'s number here is District 1260.

While the response to the German invitation was generally considered a good joke on Hitler, a serious question as to the Nazis' motive was raised in Washington.

It was suggested that the offer had been made as a blind to allow German secret agents to smuggle messages from the United States to Berlin in code.

He has published a critical study of Virgil and has written extensively on other classical authors. the remains of sand sprinkled around the District streets when snow falls.

The office of William Xanten, city refuse supervisors, reported that they had not sanded downtown Washington for more than two weeks. Sun took care of the snow that fell in the past few days, District officials explained.

While sheer stockings suffered regardless of the material or the make, Shearer said, service-weight stockings and net fabrics, made with heavier threads, withstood the dust attack. He said he had never before heard of stocking damage on such a wide scale.

H. T. Nones, of the textile division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, agreed with the dust theory.

Ruth O'Brien, in charge of the textile division of the Bureau of Home Economics, hesitated to believe reports of the stocking damage.

She said it must be "some rumor going around," and there 'is no explanation for a story like that." Later she added that "it was all nonsense."

Shearer said that he would examine more of the damaged stocking samples today.

N. Y. Bill Would Give Seized Guns to British

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 18 (AP).—A proposal to put the seized guns of New York's criminals into the hands of the British won consideration today of the State Senate.

During debate on a bill to give the weapons to the police instead of destroying them, Republican Majority Leader Joe R. Hanley suggested "they should be sent overseas where they would do some good." Senator Desmond, Newburgh Republican, who sponsored the bill, agreed to an amendment in accord with Hanley's suggestion.

Puck In Washington

Some are explaining it learnedly in terms of the second law of thermodynamics. Others say it was because a lot of razor-edged pieces of sand or stone were blown about in the gale yesterday morning. But if you ask us, it looks like a pretty plain case of enchantment. Here are the facts, and you may judge for yourself: Hundreds, maybe thousands, of women yesterday were astounded and horrified to discover that their stockings had broken into runs or ladders, or whatever you call it when the threads give way. In some cases these casualties occurred indoors; in others outdoors; but in every case the effect was the same: a pair of stockings gone to shreds. And many a girl changed her stockings yesterday only to see the second pair go the way of the first one. Moreover, chiffon, nylon and even net stockings were ruined without the slightest partiality.

Now yesterday wasn't the first windy February day that Washington has ever known. But this, as far as we can find out, is the first instance on record of a spontaneous and city-wide epidemic of stocking ladders. That seems at least prima facie evidence for believing that the stockings were just downright bewitched—not out of malice, but just for the fun of listening to so many shrill shrieks of consternation. We regret to say it, but it looks as though our old friend Robin Goodfellow is on the loose in Washington. If you find the cream missing from your milk tomorrow, or discover a stranger in your baby's cradle, or see chairs develop a sudden trick of jumping away whenever you start to sit down in one, or find Rhenish wine running out of the hot-water tap in your bathroom, please let us know.

Unions And Defense

Seldom has the House Judiciary Committee tackled a more complicated and delicate task than that now confronting it. The committee has begun hearings on several bills to prevent strikes in defense industries or minimize their effect. Presumably this is the first step toward writing legislation designed to prevent undue interference with our armament program while at the same time safeguarding the rights of labor.

Strikes affecting our national defense effort have been much too common, but the record can scarcely be regarded as alarming. Walkouts were only about half as numerous last year as they were in 1937, or for that matter during the war year of 1917. Many labor leaders are using their influence to prevent strikes in defense industries, and various governmental agencies are doing effective work to settle disputes when the disruption of work cannot be prevented. Still, walkouts are much too prevalent, and the causes for which some unions drop defense work is particularly disturbing. During the World War most of the labor disputes leading to strikes grew out of the sharp rise in the cost of living. In recent months, however, there has been no increase in the cost of living for the country as a whole that would justify widespread demands for higher wages. A large percentage of the striking groups today are more interested in such issues as the closed shop, recognition of the union and non-recognition of rival unions than in wages and working conditions.

This fact makes the problem before Congress particularly difficult and at the same time intensifies the need for a remedy. Disputes over wages and hours can usually be adjusted around a conference table; to date it has proved impossible to end the warfare between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. by that method. Naturally, each of these rivals is struggling to make itself predominant in the labor field. That is the right of each. But to allow this struggle to delay any phase of the national defense program is utterly inexcusable. Since Congress has provided the machinery through which all working men may peacefully select representatives of their own choice for collective bargaining purposes, it has a special obligation to see that no part of the defense effort is sabotaged by interunion warfare. And that obligation has been intensified by the recent Supreme Court decision which makes it lawful for labor unions to crush their rivals even though such an act may involve the restraint of interstate trade.

One other practice which demands a remedy is that of unions levying initiation fees upon every man who obtains a defense job in certain types of work. No person should be forced to pay a fee to a private organization for the privilege of participating in the defense program. The closed shop may have many virtues in strictly private enterprise, but it is obviously out of place in the performance of emergency work for the Government. Labor's rights can be fully protected without giving any union carte blanche to exploit the unemployed seeking Government-made jobs. It is time for Congress to end this abuse and to set up some carefully safeguarded device that will prevent the stoppage of defense work until every reasonable effort for a peaceful settlement has been made.

More Than Feeding

Mr. Hoover seems to have put up his plan for test feeding Belgium to the British and Nazi governments. The plan is simple enough to make an appeal on the grounds of feasibility alone. Mr. Hoover proposes to feed about a third of the nation at movable soup kitchens to which the people must present themselves for the food. In this way there would be "no question of feeding Germans," an argument which has hitherto deterred many people from lending their charitable impulses to the Hoover scheme.

But the head ought to be used before the heart is given free rein in backing this revised Hoover plan. One should take into account the facts of the European situation. Europe is almost self-supporting in most of the essential foodstuffs. As a result of the stocks which were accumulated on the threat of war, the continent, indeed, is more than self-sufficing. Even after war was declared, the British blockade authorities, to their present chagrin, allowed all the nations which have been seized by Nazi Germany to continue the piling up of stocks. For instance, Dr. Morgenstierne, Norway's Minister, recently said Norway at the time of the invasion had a year's stocks of food and other necessities. On these stocks Nazi Germany levied toll as soon as her soldiers took over. Even in Belgium, a highly industrialized country which depends to a large extent on foreign imports of foods, the supplies, as Mr. Hoover himself admits, were purloined.

The result is that the Nazis, who habitually speak of a self-sufficient Europe, are well stocked. Hitler last July 20 said that "thanks to measures adopted in time, the food supplies are guaranteed, however long the war may last." The measures included the requisitions which have left such countries in a state of half-starvation. Under the Nazi theory the dispossessed peoples owe this contribution to the herrenvolk of Germany. And the theory is for application in peace as well as in war. Already the arts of propaganda are being used among these "lower races" to accustom them to lowly foods in order that their surpluses might continue to flow to Germany. The well-fed Dutch, for instance, are being taught the comprehensive nourishment that comes from the potato.

It is dangerous living for the Nazis to keep captive peoples in a state of half-starvation as well as subjection. But they are making a gamble. Having assured themselves of such ample supplies that they have increased their own rations, they are banking upon the American people to assume their responsibility toward the Belgians and other peoples. This is what accounts for the stony front which the British have hitherto presented to Mr. Hoover. The British case is that this is a war mainly of blockade and counter-blockade. They themselves are at this moment girding up their loins to repulse a mighty effort from the Nazi war machine which will be aimed at either giving them a knockout blow or starving them out. They feel that this is their most critical hour. They are fighting for their own survival, and on their survival depends the liberation of the captive peoples. They are willing to endure the Nazi bombs and they expect the captives to face Nazi-imposed hunger as their part of the sacrifice. The test is a grim test of the resoluteness of the democracies. And the issue is still so delicately balanced that the British must press and not relax a blockade which is just as integral to their war machine as the counter-blockade is to the Nazi war machine.

The Hoover proposal throws up again the problem of our relation with this British war effort. It is announced at a time when a bill is going through the Senate which would put us squarely back of that war effort. In this as in other matters we will have to develop a consistency so that we don't find ourselves in the ridiculous position of defeating our own anti-Hitler policy. Till the Nazis are overthrown, Belgium must be considered part of Nazi Germany. And the sooner we end the Nazi hope that we will bail them out of their own responsibility to the people they have enslaved and dispossessed, the sooner will the Nazis themselves have to shoulder it.

A Friendly Hand

In our reaction to the campaign for the Police Boys' Clubs there should be no tendency to regard contributions as pure charity. It is true that the clubs make life worth living for 16,500 boys, many of whom otherwise would have no good opportunity for recreation. But the fact is that in most major cities similar clubs are sponsored as measures to prevent crime. Even with older boys and young men the technique may be applied profitably. In Philadelphia a striking decrease in arrests was noticed after the police formed clubs for youths 16 to 21. When the work is with smaller boys, the results take longer to show and are harder to measure, but they must be even greater. It is a fine thing to introduce an impressionable boy to the policeman as a friend, and not, as in many "tough" districts, as a traditional enemy. That is what you will be doing when you contribute to the support of the Boys' Clubs.

Balkan Pact

The British and the Greeks are gleaning what comfort they can out of the so-called escape clause in the new Turkish-Bulgarian pact of friendship and non-aggression. But this comfort is scant indeed. It is stipulated in the preamble that the agreement is made "without prejudice to their (Turkey's and Bulgaria's) obligations in treaties with other countries." Nevertheless the pact has opened the door to a German assault on Greece and to the possibility that Turkey may play the role of disinterested bystander.

Till now there has been a chance, if a diminishing one, that Turkey would join in the war on the side of Greece and Great Britain. The chance depended upon Bulgaria joining forces with Hitler or allowing herself to be used as a doormat over which the Nazi legions could march on Salonika and the Dardanelles. That possibility has now vanished, at least so far as a German drive on Greece is concerned. One must assume at the same time that Hitler has given assurances to Turkey and to Soviet Russia, whatever these assurances may be worth, that the German forces will for the moment leave the Dardanelles alone.

In sacrificing Greece, with whom relations have been extremely cordial for some years, the Turks may hope to spare themselves. Yet once the Germans are ensconced on the shores of the Aegean, Turkey will find herself precisely in the position that, one after another, Hitler's victims of the last few years have found themselves. Their only salvation, as, indeed, the salvation of all the nations already captive, will have to await a British victory. Far from contributing to that victory, however, the Ankara government has by its pact with Bulgaria dealt a blow to its ally and given aid and comfort to Hitler.

All that can be said by way of extenuation is that Turkey found it difficult to act contrary to the desires of the Kremlin. Again, as on so many occasions since August, 1939, Moscow has played the role of Hitler's shield bearer in the Nazi struggle to destroy civilization. The fact must also not be lost to sight that the present war will not be won or lost in the Balkans or any other remote theater but in Great Britain. It is the tree that counts, not the branches. And there the determination to fight on to a successful issue fortunately shows not the slightest signs of diminution, despite the evident chagrin in London over this new pact.

Road To Baltimore

Former Representative Kennedy's plan for a Maryland bond issue seems the most feasible means of getting a new Washington-Baltimore road now that President Roosevelt has turned thumbs down on Federal financing. Mr. Kennedy's proposal to the Maryland Legislature would authorize the State roads commission to build the highway and sell $30,000,000 in revenue bonds to private bankers. Under this arrangement the road itself would be security and the bonds would be paid off by tolls without obligation to the State. According to Mr. Kennedy, a group of bankers is ready to put up the money.

In considering this proposition, Marylanders have before them the example of the 160-mile Pennsylvania Turnpike, which is similarly financed, and is paying off at least according to schedule. Closer home they may take courage from the records of the recently completed toll bridge over the Potomac, which is operating on a sound basis despite adverse road conditions, and the Susquehanna River Bridge, where business was so good that it was possible to reduce the tolls.

There may be some opposition from leaders who do not like the idea of toll roads in general. Their position is well taken when free highways can be financed. In this case, however, years of agitation have failed to get any result. Putting the project on a list of reemployment measures for use when the current national emergency is over, according to the President's plan, places it too far in the future and gives no real assurance of completion. The road is urgently needed, and needed now, to take the load off the congested and dangerous Washington-Baltimore Boulevard.

MAEVE THE WARRIOR

Maeve tossed her bright hair
And tall she stood,
Taller than sacred oaks
In the Druid wood.
Maeve spoke, and her voice rang
Over the Irish land,
And her words were wiser than secret runes
Carved in the sand.
Maeve held her shield aloft
And caught the sun,
And the sun leapt from the queen's shield
And blinded the foe in the battle field,
And Maeve won.

Far East Considerations

Discussions as to whether or not we should continue our present obligation to defend the Philippines indefinitely seem to me to be about as realistic today as it would be to talk of calling a conference with the Axis powers to discuss the banning of submarines as an instrument of modern warfare.

The fact is that, although the islands are still under our flag and subject to our sovereignty, we have created a situation which makes it impossible for us to fulfill our solemn obligation to the Filipinos to protect them—now or at any early future date—by deliberately agreeing not to build adequate defenses and refusing even to consider preliminary steps such as deepening the harbors of the outlying Pacific islands, like Guam. So today, if Japan chooses, she can move in and there is nothing we could do to stop her. To attempt to defend the Philippines would merely mean the useless sacrifice of the lives of our soldiers and sailors and the liquidation of our Asiatic Fleet. Congressional resolutions to commence fortification of Guam, the Midways or Samoa, at this late date, will be regarded by Japan as a desperate and provocative gesture — foolish bluff. One Japanese gunboat could sail in, shell and reduce each of those islands tomorrow. When will our people stop deluding themselves and Congress stop "defending" us and "threatening" Japan with resolutions.

We cannot send our main battle fleet to Manila if we want to, for it lacks all facilities requisite for a fleet base—as none know better than the Japanese. What Germany wants above anything else is to entangle either the United States or Japan in an immediate all-out war in the Far East. That is the one thing we must avoid at all costs. Congressional threats and boasting will only serve to frighten the Japanese into acting contrary to their own best judgment. They are realists. Japan does not want to make Italy's fatal mistake. She will not move against us until and unless Britain falls, or in the event that the United States takes action which will frighten her leaders into believing that we intend to fight her some time in the future no matter what happens in Europe. If they reach that conclusion, she cannot afford to wait for us to complete the fortification of the Pacific islands and the completion of our two-ocean Navy.

So we should make no open move now—and keep our powder dry. The decisive battle will be the Battle of Britain. To help her win that, we must give Britain all possible aid in the Atlantic.

Five Control Points

There are five control points from which the ocean-borne commerce of all the world can be dominated, and the power or powers which own these five points hold the world in the hollow of their hand—commercially, strategically and militarily. Possession of these bastions, backed with adequate air and sea power, makes their possessor master of the world. They are Singapore, the Panama Canal, Dakar, the Straits of Gibraltar and the Suez Canal.

The fact that the United States has grown great and has prospered is due primarily to the fact that all these bastions have been in the hands of Great Britain, France and ourselves. These three powers in the past have been more interested in developing their economic welfare than in war. All have been loath to arm; none were predatory; all were satisfied with the status quo.

Today all this is changed. For the United States it is a matter of life and death that these five bastions do not fall into unfriendly hands. It is a matter of life and death for the entire Western Hemisphere. It is not sufficient that we defend the Panama Canal alone. It could not be held should the others fall. It, with the entire Western Hemisphere, would be held in a nut cracker to be crushed at will.

Great anxiety has been shown in this country as to the English navy, should Britain be defeated. Even were this navy transferred to us intact, its possession would only postpone the day of final reckoning unless we intended to use it with our own fleet and armies to take possession of at least Singapore and Dakar, with other bases nearer home as a second line of defense.

If these bases guard the life line of the British Empire, it can be said with truth that they are equally vital to us. They constitute our life line if we would preserve our way of life. C. BROWNING SMITH,

New District Resident Tells Of Inspection Trials

I have but recently arrived from California to take up permanent residence in the District. The following is a recountal of my experiences when I tried to get my car inspected and a District operator's permit.

Knowing that my California registration plates expired February 4, I went to the American Automobile Association headquarters to find out the procedure for having my car registered in Washington. I filled out the necessary papers, made out a check for the required amount, and imagined that I had done all that I could for the time being.

Several days later I received a card notifying me to have my car presented for safety inspection. I drove to the station near the Fish Market and into the inspection station yard and was told in language more forcible than polite that I was breaking the law by driving a car with foreign plates. I explained that I had received the notice of inspection and assumed that the plates would be given me, but was told that was not their bother, and that it was up to me to find the plates.

I was further warned that I should not drive the car with the original out-of-State plates. I went to the American Automobile Association for information and the plates were delivered to me. I returned to the inspection station, changed the plates, and when I approached the entrance to the building was asked, again in tones which, to put it mildly, were extremely gruff and impolite, Where is your operator's license?"

I showed my out-of-State license, expiring in 1942, and after some discussion was informed I must have a district license before the car could be inspected. After protesting strongly that I was attempting to comply with all the rules and regulations, the car was inspected. During the inspection I asked two men where I should obtain my operator's license and was told that the man at the exit would tell me.

When I arrived at the end of the building I was handed a rejection slip which, upon examination, showed the absence of an operator's license, a loose fog-light connection, and "obstruction to vision." The fog-light connection could have been adjusted in 30 seconds by me at the station. But I was informed that I must take it to a garage and have a certificate showing the correct adjustment had been made.

Asking, in all innocence, what the "obstruction to vision" was, I was told it was a small official sticker, placed on the window of the right front door by the Highway Department of another State to show that the car had been inspected and approved. This small sticker could have been removed without any trouble at the time of the inspection, so that no rejection slip was necessary. To cap the climax, a rejection sticker was placed on the front windshield of my car, and this, in my opinion, is more an "obstruction to vision" than the sticker on the door window. With the exception of one man, the attitude of the employes at the inspection station was so rough and discourteous that my wife was very much upset.

The next morning I went to the Ford building to try to get a driver's license. I was given an application blank to fill out. After answering all questions and turning it in to the desk, I was told to "sit down." And when I say "told" I do not mean "requested." (The man who told me to "sit down" wore civilian clothes.)

After waiting for several minutes, as instructed, I heard my name called and I was passed to person Number Two, for no apparent reason, and then was passed on to Number Three, where I was given an eye test: I was then passed back to Number Two and given the blank for the written examination, which I filled out; I then again was ordered to "sit down."

After waiting awhile I rather naturally paid more attention to the procedure being followed by the three clerks handling the business. I found that not only did each of them absent himself from the room during the next half-hour but for one period of 13 minutes not one of them attended to any other people waiting in the room, and the man on desk Number Two, in particular, permitted the written application forms to wait for periods running from 5 to 15 minutes before passing them over to desk Number One.

As I had an appointment within the next 15 minutes, I finally went up to desk Number One and asked how long it would be before I would know whether I had passed the examination and might receive my operator's license. Within two minutes I was called back, ahead of at least eight people, and given a card with instructions to take it to window Number Seven. Arriving there, I was told to wait outside the railing until my name was called, and within five minutes was called back to the window and told to take the card to the cashier, where I paid my $3, and then was sent back to window Number Seven and received my operator's license.

With the exception of the lady at window Number Seven and the cashier and the one man at the inspection department, I have never in my life experienced such rude and discourteous treatment in any public office, and would state that for the last 20 years my work has been almost exclusively with public officials in State, county and Federal departments. I have served on city planning commissions, League of Municipalities and National Conference on City Planning, as well as various traffic and safety commissions. Therefore, I feel that I have a considerable amount of experience and am qualified to judge not only efficiency but also courtesy in dealing with the public.

Seeds Of Strife

Children's pets, as well as the children themselves, sometimes complicate social life in our village. Families who move out of town to have enough room for their children to play and to keep a dog or cat soon find that the children, drunk with freedom and space, are raising white rabbits, albino rabbits—even snakes, which can be kept cozily in a pit dug in the garden but not for long.

Neither children nor animals stay home very much in our village, and incidents occur. When Teddy Kilduff's police dog killed two of the Martin boys' rabbits, it caused coolness between the two families despite expressions of regret by both Mr. and Mrs. Kilduff. The expressions may have lacked a ring of sincerity, because only the week before one of the rabbits had escaped from its pen and eaten three rows of Mr. Kilduff's lettuce. Mrs. Martin said no apologies could make the boys feel any better—it was simply heart-rending to see their faces when they found the dead rabbits. The two mothers were a little stiff in their greetings to each other for some time.

The cat bloc and the dog bloc in our village tend to regard each other with suspicion. Everybody belongs to one or the other, because you seldom like both cats and dogs. The cat lovers complain that the neighbors' dogs dig up their seed beds and ruin their evergreens, and in the summer they get covered with wood ticks and then romp with the children who may then get Rocky Mountain spotted fever. The dog owners retort that cats never stay home, they kill birds, they yowl at night, and everybody knows they carry germs.

When passions rise to the pebble-throwing stage, which sometimes occurs in the early spring gardening season, rifts in our usually pleasant social relations occur all over the village. Two or three of our most passionate gardeners, finding that pebble-throwing was only temporarily effective, started throwing water on Mrs. Haskins' cat, which is a great traveler but practically thoroughbred, being three-fourths pure Persian. Mrs. Haskins' indignation spread to other sympathetic cat owners; the dog lovers, who didn't like the Persian anyway, sided against them, and the rift lasted practically all last summer.

The bloc split into opposing camps again when the Smiths' collie took to drinking regularly out of the Turners' rock-garden pool, which had two goldfish in it. The collie always managed to drink around the goldfish, and they didn't seem to mind much, but Mrs. Turner said he drank so much on hot days she had to be forever filling the pool. She bought four tubes of some stuff supposed to be offensive to dogs and hung them around the pool, but Brownie really liked the smell. Finally she took the goldfish out for two days and dumped a pound of Epsom salts in the pool. He didn't mind that either. The Smiths heard about this from the children and said loudly that anybody who tried to make a dog sick by giving it Epsom salts to drink ought to be fined. That was relayed back to Mrs. Turner by the children, who then took word back to the Smiths that if Brownie didn't do his drinking at home, something even worse, such as mustard emetic, would be tried. Finally Mr. Turner put chicken wire over the pool, which rather spoiled its looks, and it wasn't till the pool was drained for the winter that the feud between the two families petered out.

Nothing, however, in the animal line has caused such widespread repercussions as the white-rat episode, which started when the Allens gave each of their three children a sweet little white rat for Christmas. The trouble was that there was one male and two female rats, which hadn't been evident at the time of purchase. Mrs. Allen told the neighbors that raising rats was an excellent way to teach children the importance of a balanced diet, since they pine away without the proper vitamins, and that also the children would learn the facts of life in a simple, natural way from their little rat family. The facts of life soon produced twenty-nine infant rats, and the Allen children had to build another cage in the basement as a sort of nursery. The neighborhood children flocked to the Allens' basement to play with the babies, and the Allen children decided to sell them for a nickel apiece, the money to be given to British relief. The baby rats went fast, one by one or in pairs. Some of the neighborhood mothers stipulated that when two were brought home, they should be of the same sex, but that was pretty hard to guarantee at such an early age.

About every fourth home in the village acquired one or two of the infant rats. When, however, they soon began to exhibit all the propensities of a mass-production factory, a vague resentment against the Allens took form. You couldn't exactly blame anybody else when you'd given your own child permission to bring a white rat or two home, but there was a general feeling that the Allens should not have introduced white rats into the peaceful life of the village in the first place. The original trio became great-grandparents in a remarkably short time. It wasn't until the birth rate began to decrease, because of improper diet or something, and various calamities snuffed out innumerable small rat lives, that the Allens' former popularity was restored in adult circles.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

American Love Story

I HAD borrowed a friend's car, and the chauffeur was only working for him temporarily while the regular chauffeur was on holiday. We talked while he was driving and I asked him if he had a family.

THOMPSON

"SAY," he said, "have I got a family! Little girl. Ten years old, she is, and cute! Bright! Say, she gets all A's on her report cards. Doesn't take after me. Takes after my wife. My wife! Is she smart? Say, she's a doll!

"I don't live so far from where you do. Nice neighborhood. Nice little flat. Not that you'd like it, it's a walk-up, of course, but can a workingman expect an elevator? It's the neighborhood I'm for. Pay $40 a month, and I know it's too much—if you get $35 a week, that's what I make, forty's too much for rent—but what I say is, it's your home that counts, and I'd rather spend more on rent than what you throw around for other things . . . Not that you throw much around on $35 a week, but you know what I mean.

"I could get the space cheaper, of course, in some neighborhoods, but what I think of is Peggy—we call her Peggy—and the wife and I figured, better a good neighborhood and a nice school where she meets nice kids, not rough. That's why we spend forty for rent, though it's a lot out of $35 a week, of course."

"NEVER HOME till 6, she isn't—the kid I mean. Always over to some other girl's home, every afternoon, and sometimes she comes home with eyes big like that and says, 'Dad, you never saw such a home' . . . Meaning like her school friend's got . . . And I think, gee, maybe she'll get ideas, me a chauffeur and all.

"Some of those kids that goes to the school have governesses, and you'd laugh, when she was little—too little to know better, if you know what I mean—she says to me, 'Dad, why don't I have a governess?' But now she knows how things are, me a workingman, and she's sweet, and happy, on account of all the girls like her anyway. I mean the governesses say, 'I wish my little girl had manners like Peggy,' never hogging the ice cream or anything like that.

"No, she's cute, bright, like her mother—and sensitive! Say, when she does something she oughtn't—you know how kids are—and we scold her, she gets pale and cries and cries—like we was really mad at her, and not trying to bring her up nice, you know, and like she really done something wrong, not just careless or what. Gee, she's sweet. I'm a sucker for that kid, no question.

"Sometimes I think, I wonder who she'll marry, and if he isn't nice to her and understands her, the way she is, I mean, so sensitive and loving and sweet and all, why, I'll shoot him; I give you my word, I'd shoot him, because she's not the kind of girl anyone could treat rough. She's never been accustomed.

"TAKE HER mother. She weighs 103 pounds, little—say, nobody'd get the idea she has a 10-year-old kid. Gee, I have to laugh when I see her. Got some of those shoes the toes stick out of, and size 3½—say, I could put 'em in my pocket. Honest, the kid can pull her around and muss her up. I don't know how she does it—wears a suit 3 years, and looks like she bought it yesterday, and the apartment!

"I NEVER could stand dirt, that's the way I am, but the apartment; it looks like something out of that Sloane window—that's the store on Fifth Avenue, if you happen to know it—the furniture all arranged just so, like no one lived in the apartment at all until I come home, and the ash tray just there by the chair.

"WALKS 12 BLOCKS, up where the stores are cheaper, and carries all the parcels home. Sets a table! Say, my boss don't eat better than I eat. A steak like the Waldorf—and celery and all. I say, 'Why don't you get the store boy to carry them parcels?' And she says, 'That costs 10 cents,' and I say, 'What's 10 cents;' and she says, 'Ten cents is the celery.'

"That's the way she is. Two desserts—take like you have peaches or pears and cake, too—that's two desserts, isn't it? And on 35 a week; say, I don't know how she does it.

"My boss says, 'How do you three live on $35 a week?' I told her, and she says, 'Tell him we've lived on $25 all right, too,' but I don't tell him on account of that wouldn't hardly be a smart thing to say. I just say, 'Oh, we get along somehow!'

"Every week she goes to a beauty parlor; she knows one where you get three for $1—wash, wave and manicure—say, she's a doll! She could walk right up and sit down in your living room, and she looks as good as anybody—better, I mean—because she is that way, cute and nice. Say, you'd think she was dressed right off Fifth Avenue, and how she does it I never know, but she's smart. She's a doll, I mean, and when she manages to do all the housework, cooking and cleaning and making the kid's clothes and all, I don't know. You'd think she never moved a finger."

"Her folks was rich. Why they've got a house in Queens assessed at $23,000, and they didn't like it a bit, her marrying me, a chauffeur, I mean, but I never took nothing off them, not a cent, and she says she'd live with me in a cellar. You'd laugh, but that's the way she is, and she never lived in any cellar, neither, and she never will.

"SOME FELLOWS, their wives go to work, but not for me; I wouldn't feel like a man, if you know what I mean, with her working. If you marry a girl, I say, and she has a kid or two and keeps the house and all—nice, the way she does—why that's wonderful, and getting the dough is his job."

I always get a job. I was out of a job on account of the man I worked for for eight years didn't have so much money, and the first thing they cut is a luxury like a chauffeur; that's a luxury, because they can drive themselves if they have to, if you know what I mean. This here job is temporary, but now I got a new one, starting in a week, and it's funny, but I always get a job; I don't know why, but I guess it's her and Peggy, on account of they're so cute, and—well, I say to myself, 'She's never going to put her hands in cold water as long as I can dig a ditch! I wish it was 40. Sometimes it's 30 and sometimes 40, and once I got 60, but you can't count on 60, and she says 35 is swell.

"NOW, take how some dames act. Only last week I get a call from the garage, and they say will I drive a party to Connecticut. Should I be choosy about a buck an hour when I'm between jobs like? So I says sure. It was a swell car. Cadillac 16-cylinder, and she was a swell—Him, too—but all the way out, was she mad! I couldn't help hearing? Not that I'd listen in to a party, but she was so mad, and it wasn't no limousine, just a sedan, and she says she can't live on less'n a hundred thousand. She says she never did, and she isn't going to begin at her age, and he says, 'Listen, honey, I can't help it, and I tell you we gotta cut down', and finally she shuts up in a freeze that I could feel on my neck like a north wind. Gee, was I sorry for that guy!

"And I figure I'm not so much for making money, but if you don't have luck one way you have it another, and if anybody was to come up to me and say, you give her up and I give you a million, what do you think I'd answer? Why, I'd just laugh. Say, would I laugh! For a million? Huh! Say, she's a doll!"

Far Eastern Outlook

EXPERT OPINION here inclines to the theory that unless strong measures are promptly taken, the Japanese will move against Singapore or the Netherlands Indies in about a month, or perhaps sooner. If they do move, and are successful, the war in the Far East will be lost. It may prove one of the major misfortunes of our time, therefore, that the approaching crisis finds the Navy Department both badly divided on policy, and in the hands of men without real Far Eastern experience.

American officers with this experience, who have seen the Japanese navy in action, are virtually unanimous that strong measures can be taken at little risk to ourselves. A mere gesture, such as the sending of a flotilla of cruisers on a "courtesy visit" to Singapore, is considered enough to frighten the Japanese into good behavior for a long time to come.

Those men who know the Japanese strength at first hand are firmly convinced it is vastly exaggerated. While they admit the Japanese navy is fairly impressive in quantity, they hold its quality in severe contempt, and predict it could be dealt with adequately in six months by the American Navy's Pacific squadron. Furthermore, the Japanese Islands themselves are extremely vulnerable. All the war industries, for example, are concentrated in the Osaka-Yokohama region, and being housed in factories of paper and matchwood, might conceivably be put out of production by fire bombs from the planes of a single aircraft carrier.

CONSEQUENTLY many of the Far Easterners in our Navy feel that failure to draw the issue with Japan now, before trouble arises, will prove an error comparable to the Anglo-French failure to draw the issue with Italy at the beginning of the war. And while they do not all go quite so far, almost every one of them privately thinks that cruisers should have been sent to Singapore, and other similar measures taken long before this.

Unfortunately the chief of naval operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark, is a rather careful, elaborately methodical individual who, for all his other virtues, possesses little dash or boldness. During his career, only five months in 1917 were passed in Asiatic waters. Among the other members of the general board of the Navy, Far Eastern experience is not common. The Far Easterners' bold strategy is supported by many senior officers of the utmost distinction, such as Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, one of the ablest men the Navy has had in many years. But like Admiral Yarnell, they are retired from the direction of affairs. Thus Stark and the general board are haunted by the fear that any measures we may take will risk reprisals from Japan, and that we shall find ourselves still involved with the Japanese when a threat from the European Axis power calls for greater naval strength in the Atlantic.

Unless the President turns for advice to the men who know the Far Eastern picture, we may remain immobilized. And it is difficult to exaggerate the seriousness of the possible consequences of a timid American policy in the Far East.

The present Far Eastern situation is reasonably simple. Some months ago, under pressure from the German advisers who now control their war plans, the Japanese began withdrawing troops from China, and concentrating them on the Islands of Hainan and Formosa. Simultaneously, strong naval detachments were sent southward, and Indo-China was occupied. Preparations for a further move were then put on foot. These preparations are now complete, down to the accumulation of transport for at least five army divisions, and the sending of technicians to the airfields of Japan's secret ally, Siam. An expeditionary force is in fact in being, and at present is probably being trained in overseas invasion techniques by movements between Hainan, Formosa and the Indo-Chinese coast.

Singapore, the main goal of the Japanese, is thought to be invulnerable to direct attack by sea. It has lately been considerably reinforced, both with troops and planes, and especially with the latter. Even now, however, it may well not be strong enough to ward off a Japanese land attack, beginning with the landing of troops on the Malay peninsula beyond the city's defenses. Moreover, it is generally believed that five divisions are sufficient to overcome the defenses of the Netherlands Indies. And as Sumatra is just across the straits of Malacca, within actual sight of the British base, the loss of the Netherlands Indies would render Singapore almost useless.

SINGAPORE may seem far off to be of importance to this country. Yet Singapore is the only potential base for our fleet within 2,000 miles. If it goes, the Japanese will be almost immune to attack in the Far East. They will also be able to block the Burma Road, China's last contact with the outer world; to command the Indian Ocean and threaten Australia and New Zealand, and to cut off both this country's and Britain's supplies of rubber and tin. In short, the development that now threatens will prove downright tragic if it comes.

As has been said, the men who really know the Far East believe a mere gesture, such as the sending of the cruiser flotilla mentioned above, will be sufficient to keep the Japanese quiet. Last summer, when the American fleet left Honolulu, the Japanese navy, overcome with panic, moved out of its battle stations and stood ready to fight until our ships were located. Last fall, when the Japanese were full of dire threats against this country, a little verbal firmness by the President and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox was sufficient to bring Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoka and other Japanese officials, bowing and hissing politely, to our embassy to bewail a "misunderstanding." Firmness pays in dealing with Japan. It is to be hoped we shall not let the whole Far East go by default for want of a little timely firmness.

Quadruple Attack

By Ernest Lindley

Where To Look For Hitler's Next Moves

PRIME MINISTER MacKENZIE KING has warned the Canadians to expect a simultaneous quadruple attack on the British Empire:

1. A direct assault on Great Britain.
2. A march through Spain to Gibraltar.
3. A drive into Greece and Turkey, with the Suez Canal and the oil fields of Iraq as its ultimate objective.
4. A Japanese move southward, to the East Indies, or perhaps in the form of a direct attack on Singapore.

LINDLEY

Mr. King's warning reflects the views of Prime Minister Churchill. The same analysis has been brought directly to Washington within the last few days by men who have talked with Churchill.

The assault may not materialize on four fronts. It would be more accurate, perhaps, to say that Churchill is braced for a quadruple attack. The people of Great Britain and the Dominions and the United States are now being braced for it.

HERETOFORE it had been assumed that the Germans would try to avoid fighting on more than one front at one time. Speculation has been concerned with the direction of the next Nazi thrust.

But the British now believe that the Germans have many more men and many more munitions than can be employed effectively on a single front. Likewise, they believe that the Germans have more planes than they can put into action on a single front, owing to lack of air fields and to the problems of organizing supplies. German superiority in land and air forces may therefore be used most tellingly in simultaneous attacks on three fronts, rather than by making one move at a time.

A march through Spain, after the snow has melted in the passes of the Pyrenees, would hardly count as war on a second front. The Spaniards are too weak to resist, even if they chose to do so.

The British say that Gibraltar can hold out indefinitely as a fortress. But if the Germans march to its gates, they can render it useless as a naval base and, by submarine action and aerial bombing, can make it extremely difficult for British supply ships to enter or leave the Mediterranean at its western end.

A drive through Turkey would be more difficult. But the Germans now have some 350,000 troops in Rumania and are filtering into Bulgaria. If they can make Jugoslavia yield a right of way they can pour additional troops into Greece, and probably mass such land and air forces as to push farther—without calling upon the troops, planes, and ships assembled for an attack on Great Britain.

The assault on Britain itself is, of course, the most important, and the most venturesome and most difficult for the Nazis.

CHURCHILL admits no doubt about the ability of the British to destroy an invading force, even if temporarily it should gain a foothold. He admits no doubt about the ability of the British people to stand up under even heavier bombing from the air. He believes that with our aid the Germans can be prevented from strangling Great Britain by counterblockade.

As to the other theaters of war, he has said only that the British are determined to give a good account of themselves. And among these theaters is the Orient.

Churchill, it may be said on good authority, has discarded the theory, held by some in England as well as here, that the British Empire should yield in the Far East. According to this theory, if the British should lick the Nazis they could later recover, in cooperation with the United States, their position in the South Pacific—perhaps without fighting.

It is no secret that many of our diplomatic and naval experts have held that we should avoid armed conflict with Japan while the outcome of the battle of the Atlantic between Great Britain and Germany remains undecided. If the British suddenly went down, or lost most of their navy, our fleet almost certainly would be shifted to the Atlantic and most of the Far East would fall into the lap of Japan.

While the Japanese have been crawling southward toward Singapore and the East Indies, they have avoided going so far as to come into armed conflict with the Western powers. If they entered such a conflict, and the British then defeated the Nazis, the sequel might be the destruction of Japan as a great power by the combined pressure of the British and American navies.

IT IS DOUBTED here that the Japanese would be so stupid and so accommodating to a distant and uncertain ally as to lead the assault on the British Empire. But there has been some fear that they would move after Hitler launches his spring attacks without waiting to see the results. Even if they waited, as Mussolini did, they might misjudge the situation as disastrously to themselves as he did to Italy.

Churchill, it is reliably stated, is determined to fight if the Japanese invade the East Indies—and, of course, if they attack Singapore or approach so close as seriously to impair its use as a naval base. He believes that the Far East is too important—to Great Britain and to us—to be allowed to go by default, even temporarily.

If the British and Dutch fight in the Far East, it is hardly conceivable that we will stand aside. The President suggested his own appraisal when he said at his press conference that we could fight in the Far East and at the same time aid England across the Atlantic.

If the Japanese read the signs right, they will save the British and ourselves a lot of trouble, and they will avoid the risk of their own ultimate destruction as a great power.

But the British are braced for fighting on four fronts. That Churchill is taking so pessimistic a view of the scope and scale of the war within the next few weeks is reassuring proof that the British have not been forced to rely on the weak protection of wishful thinking.

Fair Enough

A Vanishing Breed

I HAVE RECEIVED several intimations that my persistent yapping, and furthermoring at certain of our labor unions, is having a quail-a-day effect on the readers of these dispatches, who, therefore, may be glad to receive assurance that this is a change of pace, a pleasure which doubtless will be shared by William Green. Anyway, I have long had it in mind to say that my idea of a first-class newspaperman is a little fellow that few people outside New York, except other newspapermen, ever heard of, and to fill you in on some of his characteristics, because the type is a vanishing breed nowadays, what with the development of social-consciousness and missions-in-life among the members of our set.

Our subject is Sidney Whipple, who does theaters for the World-Telegram, and who can do just about anything anybody can ask of him around the editorial side of a newspaper or press association and do everything well. He can write foreign stuff from the cables, for instance, turn out a noon or closing lead on the market, go out and get a story by hand, whether an interview or an up-the-dark-and-creaking-stairs piece about a sick child in a tenement, toss off jingle-verse almost as fast as he can play the typewriter, read copy, file a wire, fill in on sports or compose an editorial for or against anything.

THERE NEVER were many as versatile as Sidney, who, for extra, can tell Cockney jokes dating from the time when he worked a trick in London and spent his nights frequenting the 'alls, play piano by ear like an old-time professor in a joint and, when we were very young, could skin the cat as neat as you please on those white-enameled strap hangers' handles in the subway. That was in the early days of prohibition, when there was a horrible goats' nest in an old building down behind the old World where a couple of boys who were prohibition agents sold sherry made out of sirup, red pepper, tobacco juice, liquid soap and painters' alcohol, which we used to drink for choice, because the rye and Scotch were unreliable and might contain harmful elements.

After work at the old United News, about 2 or 3 a. m., Sidney and I, and often Henry Farrell, the day-side sport editor, and maybe one or two others, would do a little relaxing in this place and when we all got fairly well rejoiced and started home he would hop up, grab those handles and turn himself inside out and back again with his change and papers showering out of his pockets all over the floor.

But, as I say, we were very young then and full of gay spirits, and, anyway, we were putting in, it seems to me now, about 11 or 12 hours a day of steady writing, and the choice of amusements was pretty limited after 3 a. m. You had to get some fun out of life.

Before that Sidney had been a city editor in Syracuse, and since then he has been a managing editor in South Bend and Denver, and, although he hasn't the Chapin or Bovard temperament, discipline under him would be pretty informal. I will say that any young reporter who worked for him and really paid attention was bound to learn the business if he was any good whatever.

IN OUR TIME Europe was bubbling every day, and Ireland was in a terrible state of war against the Black and Tans, and Sidney would come in late in the afternoon, and by 6 o'clock, when the wire opened, would have a nice stack of as clean and musical copy as ever you read, all prepared for the operators. Then he would file the wires and continue writing.

He would skin the afternoon papers, too, without having to be told or advised, and pick out maybe half a dozen little harmless brighteners which he would whip into items of from 100 to 200 words, and the night the big Navy dirigible pulled the cap out of her nose at the mast in Lakehurst and blew out to sea in a storm he sat there banging away for hours without getting out of his chair as jerky little bulletins came in over the ticker or correspondents phoned from down the coast.

You know why he is so good, aside from his natural class? Because he was just crazy about the newspaper business. How can anybody stand out who thinks he is wasting his time on a decadent and monotonous occupation?

Balkan Bombshell

By Barnet Nover

The Turkish-Bulgarian Pact

HAD TURKEY and Bulgaria concluded their newly announced "pact of friendship" a year or two ago nobody could possibly have raised any objections to it. Its professed intentions are admirable, its phraseology for the most part innocuous to the point of inanity, and it has an "escape clause" specific enough to satisfy the most extreme demands of diplomatic punctilio.

NOVER

Coming at this time, however, the pact has the potential force of a bombshell. Its very ingenuousness creates the suspicion that it hides more than it reveals. Ostensibly an agreement whereby Turkey and Bulgaria agree not to attack each other, it may turn out to be an agreement permitting Germany to attack their neighbor, Greece, or frighten the latter into concluding an armistice with Italy. That is why there can be no disguising the fact that the Turkish-Bulgarian treaty is bad news for Great Britain and her ally.

INTERNATIONAL agreements cannot be considered in a vacuum, least of all between countries that are directly or indirectly allied to nations at war. Turkey happens to be an ally of Great Britain; Bulgaria has slowly but steadily moved into the orbit of the Axis so that today her status begins to approach the status of Rumania, an undefeated nation whose rulers "invited" Germany to send in an army of occupation.

Until just the other day there was the possibility that a German occupation of Bulgaria, whether open or covert, would meet with the forcible opposition of the Turks. For while Bulgaria is the pathway between the Danube and the Aegean it is also the pathway between Rumania and the Dardanelles. Indeed, the Turkish press issued repeated warnings to Bulgaria not to become the catspaw of the Third Reich. Yet now that this has happened, the Turks proceed to make a treaty which looks suspiciously like an acceptance by the Ankara government of Bulgaria's new status and a pledge not to do anything about it so long as Bulgaria is not used as a base of operations against Turkey herself.

HOW EXPLAIN this apparent Turkish about-face?

The answer is to be found in an examination of certain recent developments. These include (1) Britain's smashing victory over the Italians in North Africa which has eliminated for the time being and perhaps for the duration of this war the possibility of a concerted Axis drive on the Suez Canal. (2) The unreadiness and unwillingness of the Balkan nations to establish a solid bloc in defense of the independence of each. (3) Germany's piecemeal approach to the Mediterranean via Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria, each step of which has had the effect of neutralizing one or more of the Third Reich's potential opponents.

LAST FALL, after the failure of Field Marshal Goering's Luftwaffe to bring the British to their knees, the Axis had to explore alternative means by which this aim could be achieved. One possibility that was undoubtedly considered was a joint German-Italian drive on the British lifeline in the Mediterranean. To that end the Italians carried out in Egypt what Mussolini called their "lightning-like" attack on Sidi Barrani. To the same end Hitler made efforts to bring Gen. Franco, Marshal Petain, Russia, Rumania and Bulgaria in line.

Had these diplomatic maneuvers succeeded, the anticipated Italian offensive against Alexandria and the Suez Canal might have coincided with an attack on Gibraltar through Spain and with a German or a German-Italian drive to the Aegean and across the Dardanelles, Anatolia and Syria to the oil fields of Irak and beyond. But Germany's diplomatic offensive succeeded only partially while, beginning early in December, a British offensive developed in western Egypt which in the next two months brought Gen. Wavell's Army of the Nile well beyond the great east Libyan base of Bengasi.

For the time being, therefore, no point would be served by a German drive to the Dardanelles. Such a drive, by bringing the Turks into the war, would compel a division in Germany's forces at a moment when she may need every ounce of her fighting power against Great Britain.

For the moment, the Turks are safe. That being the case, Soviet Russia, far from being ready to pledge Turkey any assistance in the event the latter should resent a German occupation of Bulgaria, may have put pressure on the Ankara government to accept such an occupation as an accomplished fact. It is clear that one purpose behind recent German maneuvers in the Balkans is to lock the door against any possibility of having to fight a war on two fronts at this time. That purpose Soviet Russia is not inclined to discourage. For the spread of the war in the Balkans might make it impossible for Moscow to stay out, and the last thing Russia wants to do at this time is to get involved in a war. Now, as at all times since the Molotoff-Ribbentrop pact of nonaggression of August, 1939, of which the present Turkish-Bulgarian pact is, in a sense, the lineal descendant, Russia finds herself compelled to lead not from strength but from weakness.

IN THE LONG run neither Turkey nor Russia can assume that Hitler will not make a drive against the Dardanelles once he has eliminated Greece as a combatant. Since his ultimate purpose in any move in the direction of the Mediterranean must continue to be the elimination of British strength in that area, he cannot help but regard Turkey as a potential stepping stone even though for the moment he may be quite willing to let that country alone. For that reason the so-called escape clause in the Turkish-Bulgarian pact may not be entirely meaningless. It declares that the terms of the agreement are "without prejudice to their obligations (that is the obligations of the two countries) in treaties with other countries." In other words the present pact does not invalidate the Anglo-Turkish treaty of alliance. And there is the additional possibility that should she at some future time chose to do so, Turkey might interpret the Sofia government's permission to Germany to use Bulgaria as a base of operations as an act of aggression counter to the provisions of Article 1 of the treaty.

For their part the British authorities take the position that the Turkish-Bulgarian agreement has little meaning. This looks like wishful thinking. Certainly the refusal of Turkey to enter such an agreement would have been hailed in London as a British victory. But Turkey did not refuse. She signed on the dotted line and in doing so cast grave doubts on her willingness to observe the spirit as well as the letter of the treaty of alliance with Great Britain.

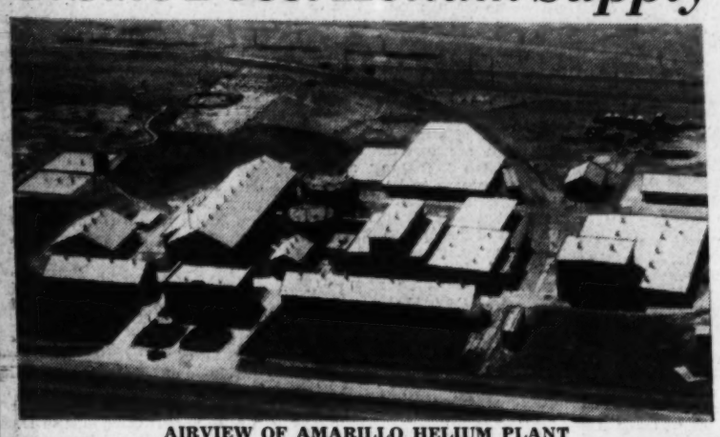
U. S. to Boost Helium Supply



AIRVIEW OF AMARILLO HELIUM PLANT

Helium is in the news again. The United States has a virtual monopoly of the fireproof lifting gas, and it is about to increase production of it. To that end, President Roosevelt, through the Bureau of the Budget, has asked Congress for an appropriation of $525,000 to expand the helium plant at Amarillo, Tex.

Does this mean that Uncle Sam is going in again for big lighter-than-air craft, notwithstanding the disastrous fate of the Shenandoah, Akron and Macon? Navy officials deny that there is any such intention.

However, the Navy is building six blimps, first of an authorized 48, to be used for coastal patrol work. Capt. Charles Rosendahl, the Navy's lighter-than-air craft expert, says these blimps would be particularly valuable in antisubmarine and antimine work. Their value in this respect, he says, lies in the fact that they can cruise slowly and low over the water.

Helium was discovered in the atmosphere of the sun by an English astrophysicist, J. N. Lockyer, in 1868. He named it helium after Helios, the Greek sun god.

It was generally agreed that the mighty German dirigible Hindenburg would never have crashed in flames had she been inflated with helium in May, 1937. Dr. Hugo Eckener thereafter begged the United States for a supply of the precious gas. This country was about to begin supplying Germany when Secretary of the Interior Ickes blocked the plan.

'It Was in the Hands of God'

Gary Klein, 21-month-old victim of a rare bronchial disorder, was home from Children's Hospital yesterday, his health restored by an "iron lung," a delicate operation, and six transfusions from the blood bank.

The child's life was saved originally by the Silver Spring Rescue Squad's new respirator, when his trachea collapsed three weeks ago after a severe attack of croup. It was the first time the respirator, donated by the Lions' Club, had been used.

The respirator's second case, 3-week-old Barbara Anne Ebbess, of Burnt Hills, Md., was at Washington Sanitarium yesterday under observation for a serious digestive difficulty. The Silver Spring firemen had revived her on two occasions, Friday night, then Sunday, when she suffered strangulation.

"When an operation like that succeeds," Dr. Davis said, "the only thing you can do is feel humble. It was in the hands of God."

Masters of Air to Rule World, Bullitt Says in Call for More Planes

Doubled Output Urged in Address To Phi Beta Kappas

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 18.—Urging a speedup in plane production, William C. Bullitt warned tonight that if Germany—by controlling the air—wins the war "the Nazi dream of a German super-race over a world of unarmed slaves might become a reality."

In a speech for the annual meeting of Phi Beta Kappa, the former Ambassador to France said "The masters of the air will be in the future the masters of the planet."

"In the next decades," he said, "either a fairer world than mankind has yet known or a world black with tyranny and strewn with death will come into being under the shadow of wings."

Urges Output Be Doubled

America is not producing planes at war speed, the former envoy declared. He added:

"If we willed the end and willed the means, we could produce double the number of planes that we now plan to produce in 1942."

Bullitt said that "it is comfortable to go on producing as we are now," but that sacrifices would be necessary to increase production.

"There are those who think . . . we are in no danger although they know the aim of the Nazis is to rule over a world of slaves," he said. "They say it would make little difference to us if the British fleet should disappear from the Atlantic, although they know that Germany, Italy and Japan are leagued against us. . . .

Sure They Please Hitler

"I do not know whether these men and women are merely ignorant or whether they desire to see totalitarian government established in the United States, but I am very sure they are talking and behaving exactly as Hitler would like them to talk and behave."

Full text of his address follows:

Our Society of Phi Beta Kappa owes its existence to the belief that scholarship serves mankind. We believe that there are such things as facts that may be discovered by the labor of the intellect working in freedom without fear. And we believe that there is such a thing as truth that may be discovered not only by the flashing perceptions of saints and poets but also by painstaking study of facts.

We members of Phi Beta Kappa do not share the attitude attributed to Herbert Spencer, who was said to have felt that the supreme tragedy of human life was a beautiful theory slain by a refractory fact. We welcome refractory facts. If a theory, however beautiful, is false, we see no tragedy in death. To Pilate's question, "What is truth?", our answer is, "Seek and ye shall find."

In no area of research is it more difficult to discover fact and truth than in the area of history. Napoleon once said, "What is history but a fable agreed upon?", and he had much justification for that remark. History is kind to victors, and the vanquished in the drama usually are given the roles of criminals or fools. If Washington had failed, he would have appeared in history as a traitor to the Crown. If Lincoln had failed, he would have been written down as an ungainly and baleful fanatic.

"Truth Is Great"

Time would have altered these estimates; but the great Roman saying: "Magna est veritas et prevalebit," is true only when the poet's footnote is added so that the sentence reads: "The truth is great and will prevail when none cares whether it prevails or not."

The facts of contemporary history are obscured and distorted by all propaganda machines of the world, and it is far harder for any man to analyze dispassionately events that have moved his own emotions than to sit in judgment on long-buried kings. To comprehend the history of our own times is, therefore, inordinately difficult; but unless we do understand it we cannot act wisely in the present—and the present for our country is a time of peril, when we must act wisely or perish.

Tonight I should like to suggest to you just one of many lines of approach to contemporary history that seem to me useful. That line begins with a decision made in Berlin eight years ago.

On the thirtieth of January, 1933, the leader of the Nazi movement became chancellor of the German Reich and decided to create as fast as possible an air force stronger than the combined air forces of the rest of the world. In secret, the work was begun at once and was pushed with every energy that could be found in Germany.

Reich Spared No Effort

It takes much time to create an air force—much time to build factories, manufacture machine tools, train workmen, mechanics and pilots. We in America are learning how much time it takes. The increase in our output of combat planes even today is due almost entirely to extensions of our factories paid for in 1939, first by the French, then by the British.

From 1933 to the present moment—eight years—the German government has spared nothing and no one in its effort to dominate the air of this planet. But it was not until the latter part of 1936, after three years of intense labor, that the German factories began to produce vast quantities of planes. Even as late as March, 1936, when the German army occupied the Rhineland, the French air force was still stronger than the German air force. Since the French army was far stronger than the German army, the French could have made war then and destroyed the Nazi airplane factories. They did not, and by the end of 1936 it was too late.

The new German planes, issuing in vast numbers from the factories, had rendered the old French planes obsolete. Moreover, French plane production had been so wrecked by the application of a plan which looked well on paper but had no connection with reality, that while German plane production was approaching 1,000 a month, French production fell to 37 a month. The British air force, in the name of economy, had been starved almost out of existence.

In the spring of 1937, the French and British awakened to the fact that Germany controlled the air of Europe, and that the Nazis could and would bomb Paris and London to dust if their plans of conquest should be opposed by force of arms.

Air Power's Influence

All Americans are familiar with Admiral Mahan's great book: "The Influence of Sea Power Upon History." I wish that some Mahan of our day—perhaps he is in this room—would write now a work on "The Influence of Air Power on the History of Our Times."

I know of my own knowledge the decisive part that Germany's control of the air played in every diplomatic negotiation and every vital decision of the French and British governments from the spring of 1937 to the outbreak of the present war. The influence of sea power on history was never greater than was the influence of German air power during those desperate years when Austria and Czecho-Slovakia were devoured, and all the smaller nations of Europe began to quiver in fear, while so-called great powers stood by mentally paralyzed and physically impotent.

The influence of German air power on the course of the war is as well known to you as it is to me. Of my own knowledge, I can only add this: The German air force was the decisive factor in the destruction of the French army. The Germans broke through on the Meuse by using a new technique of wave after wave of bombing planes followed by wave after wave of tanks. They used the same technique at other points where they broke the French lines. The German tanks were relatively ineffective when they were not preceded by waves of planes. Germany's control of the air defeated France.

You are all as familiar as I am with the results produced by German air attack on England. Thanks to the heroism of the British aviators and the quality of the British machines and the superb courage of the common man and his wife and child in England, those attacks have produced not surrender but a dogged determination to fight on to victory.

Nevertheless, we do not know what new sufferings the German air force may inflict on the British people, and we do not know to what extent German planes, acting in cooperation with submarines, may cut off Great Britain from food and supplies by sinking merchant ships—the plane gives eyes; it guides the killer ships to their prey; it assists in the kill. We do know that neither in quality of pilots nor in quality of machines have the Germans surpassed the British, but that their domination of the air is the result of numbers alone—that is to say, the result of the four years headstart in production resulting from the decision made in the winter of 1933 to produce in Germany an air force capable of dominating the earth.

A number of persons who do not like our democratic way of life in the United States have seized on the physical successes of Germany to reach the conclusion, and to affirm, that there is in the Nazi system of dictatorship, persecution, secret police and firing squads, some mystical "wave of the future," and that totalitarian Germany cannot be beaten. I suggest that they might read the life of the great Dutch Admiral Tromp, who, in 1652, when the British had neglected their fleet, defeated it and sailed the Channel with a broom at his masthead to show that he had swept the British from the seas. He died in battle against a renewed British fleet in 1653.

A Comparison

Thenceforth, the British did not neglect their fleet. And there is not the slightest doubt that if the British had not neglected their air force but had begun to build as fast as Germany in 1933, there would be a Reichskanzler of Germany today whose name would not be Hitler. I do not wish to sully the memory of that sturdy and admirable old Dutch Admiral Tromp by an odious comparison, but I am not at all sure that 1943 may not reserve for a person who has swept the skies the same fate that 1653 reserved for Tromp. I am very sure that most Americans hope that in this case history will repeat itself exactly.

We as a nation are doing something to make that hope a reality, but we are doing not half enough. Ever since last July, I have been attempting to make my own countrymen realize that we should be producing airplanes and other instruments of defense as fast as if we were in war. But the policy of superimposing production for defense on the normal business of the country was official policy until December 29 last when the President, in an address to the Nation, said:

"We must have more ships, more guns, more planes—more of everything. This can only be accomplished if we discard the notion of business as usual.' The job cannot be done merely by superimposing on the existing productive facilities the added requirements for defense."

In spite of that pronouncement, we are not yet producing at war speed. If we willed the end and willed the means, we could double the number of planes that we now plan to produce in 1942.

It is very comfortable and agreeable to go on producing as we are now producing. No one is bothered—everyone is pleased. If we should increase our program of production vastly, everyone would be bothered. Industrialists who are now refusing war orders would have to take them. Skilled workmen who prefer to work in one place would have to work in another. Housekeepers would have to go without aluminum pots and pans. There would be new automobiles but no new models. The easy life we now enjoy would be a bit less easy. I myself believe that there is not one American worthy of the name who would not make these and vastly greater sacrifices gladly. Washington's troops did not think about the shine on their shoes—they did not even have the shoes—when they stood in the snow at Valley Forge. And I believe that we, the heirs of their sufferings, are as ready as they were to sacrifice for our country.

There are those who think—or pretend to think—that such sacrifices would not be for our country. They tell us that we are in no danger although they know that the aim of the Nazis is to rule over a world of slaves. They say it would make little difference to us if the British fleet should disappear from the Atlantic, although they know, as we all do, that Germany, Italy and Japan are leagued against us by the Pact of Berlin of September 27, 1940.

They admit that we have only a one-ocean navy and that if the British fleet should disappear we could not control both the Atlantic and the Pacific, but that one ocean or the other would be controlled by the totalitarian powers. Their soothing argument is that all these facts make little difference since we could defend the whole Western Hemisphere from hypothetical air bases in North and South America which do not now exist with a force of 25,000 combat planes which do not exist—keeping 10,000 of these planes constantly in line.

As Hitler Would Like

They omit to mention the fact that we shall not have 25,000 combat planes at the present rate of manufacture until 1943 or 1944. They conveniently ignore the fact that there are powerful totalitarian elements in many states of South America which are waiting only for the disappearance of the British navy to make it possible for them to strike for power and invite the cooperation of Germany. They even fail to ask us to note that the hypothetical American air bases in South America could be supplied and maintained only by sea—since there is no road or railroad from the United States to South America—and that we could not supply or maintain air bases on both the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts of South America if one of those oceans should be controlled by a totalitarian fleet.

I do not know whether these men and women are merely ignorant or whether they desire to see totalitarian government established in the United States; but I am very sure that they are talking and behaving exactly as Hitler would like them to talk and behave.

I suggested that the title of the book which should be written by the Admiral Mahan of this day ought to be "The Influence of Air Power on the History of Our Times." I should perhaps have suggested the title: "The Influence of the Airplane on Human Life."

The airplane is still in its infancy. Yet it has shrunk the earth to dimensions that would have seemed fantastic when most of us were children. In those days we were vastly entertained by a romance entitled "Around the World in Eighty Days." Such a quick trip seemed impossible. But in 1938 an airplane circled the earth in 3 days and 19 hours. That plane is already obsolete. The same trip could be made now in less than three days.

The World Is a Community

The world of my childhood was 25 times as large as the world of today. Europe is closer to Los Angeles now in travel time than New York was to Philadelphia when our Constitution was framed. The airplane—and the radio—have drawn all the peoples of the earth into one community. And we Americans can no more escape the consequences of having international gangsters at large in that community than the citizens of Chicago could escape the consequences of having Al Capone at large in their community.

I suggest to you, therefore, that in our study of the history of our own times we must begin by revising all our assumptions and convictions about international relations not from a bird's-eye point of view but from a pilot's eye point of view. The masters of the air will be in the future the masters of the planet.

If the Germans, by controlling the air, should be victorious in the present war, the Nazi dream of a German super-race ruling over a world of unarmed slaves might well become a reality. If the British should win the war, the air of Europe and Africa would be held free by the British—and the air of the Western Hemisphere by ourselves—for the lawful commerce of all nations. And if China should retain her independence, Asia would be open to all who come and go in peace. The airplane which is now being used for destruction might become the chief instrument for the maintenance of a world order based not on brutality and slavery but on the old, old principle, "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you."

"Paradise," said Mahomet, "is under the shadow of swords."

Our Part in Civilization

In the next decades either a fairer world than mankind has yet known or a world black with tyranny and strewn with death will come into being under the shadow of wings.

We Americans are the heirs of 20 centuries of Christian civilization. All that is good in our lives springs from that civilization. Our part now is to help produce wings for that civilization. If we produce them in sufficient numbers, Hitler will share the fate of Lucifer, who, when he soared above the earth and faced the stars in their courses, sang:

"Around the ancient track march'd,
The army of unalterable law."

That law, which the stars serve, is the moral law—and it is no less the law of man than the law of God.

The night which covers this little earth is black with battle, wounds, torture, and starvation; but we, in America, can forge—here and now—the wings of the morning.

Halifax Town House Now Red Cross Depot

The London town house of Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador to the United States, is the main depot of American Red Cross clothing supplies for air raid victims in London, the Red Cross here has been advised.

Lord Halifax turned over his town house at 88 Eaton Square to the Women's Voluntary Services, of which Lady Reading is chairman, immediately upon the declaration of war in September, 1939. It was used to house refugees at first, but lately has been converted into a warehouse for the relief clothing, because of its central location. While many nearby sections have been bombed, the square has escaped thus far.

2 Cops Help Thief Load 200-Lb. Loot on Truck

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Two detectives, seeing a junkman struggling to load a 200-pound beer cooler onto his wagon at a bar near headquarters, volunteered to help the junkie yesterday. Job done, they returned to the tavern and told the proprietor. The owner, who had just installed a new cooler, first scowled, then guffawed.

The sleuths had helped the junkie steal the cooler.

Dancer Tells How to Acquire Form Divine

By Ida Jean Kain

DANCERS, who have to do their "warming up" exercises in the crowded wings of the thteater, say it takes standing room only to do the calisthenics necessary for streamlines. So, don't let the lack of space cramp your style.

If you ask Nadine Gae, lovely acrobatic and tap star, the crowded quarters may be a good thing. You are forced to be precise in your movements, and that better results with your exercise.

This theory of precision certainly seems to work for her. She has one of the most beautifully proportioned figures on the New York stage—a waistline 11 inches smaller than the bust and hips only 2 inches larger. How do you like her figure—bust, 33 inches; waist, 22 inches; hips, 35 inches.

Walk on Bare Toes

You can have one as good, she promises, for the exercising. Here is a compact set of slimmers which are easy to do and require very little space:

Walk barefoot on the toes, with the entire body stretched up as tall as possible, arms overhead "and grab things out of the air—pretend you are reaching for golden apples just beyond your grasp." Work upward with the ribs on one side, then on the other, to increase the stretch in the midsection as you walk about the room. This is excellent for posture, as well as waistline.

When you have finished that exercise, relax—let the head sink down on the chest, let the shoulders droop, and, finally, let the entire trunk dangle toward floor, knees relaxed. Inhale as you dangle downward, and exhale as you come up to standing position. Repeat two or three times.

Stand erect but with the knees relaxed for this one: Begin with the right hand, and stretch the arm out to the side, letting the shoulder follow. As you do this, keep the midriff stretched up so that your waist gets the benefit of both an up and a lateral stretch. Come back to position and reac the left hand out to the side and repeat.

You'll Want to Relax

After that, you will want to relax completely for a minute or two.

Another good circulation jogger is to jump in the air, starting from a relaxed position with knees loose, and springing high into the air. As you land, cross first right foot, then left in front of the other.

Miss Gae likes bending exercises to strengthen the tummy muscles. She says the only trouble is that you are apt to get in a hurry and let your abdominal girdle go slack when you bend. Her technique is to stand with feet wide apart and about parallel, figure stretched tall, and the tummy muscles pulled up so firmly that the figure has a scooped-out look. Then, keeping hips still, legs straight, she swings the trunk down and around to the side, grasping the ankle with both hands and tugging to increase the bend. If you are in good condition, you might try that, but it's not for softies.

Speeding Up a Shampoo

Hollywood, Calif.—In a reminiscing mood May Robson recalls that, during her early barnstorming days, actreses always shampooed their own hair and were often compelled to complete the entire routine within an hour. She accelerated drying her hair by heating large Turkish towels and wrapping them around her head. Miss Robson's next is "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America" in which she plays the title role.

The beige wool sport jacket is vitalized with La Mode's American couture fruit buttons. The button, in miniature dish form, is polished wood with fruits of colored catalin in the center

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Blow for Liberty

The world is in a bad way, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, told her press coference yesterday.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"Do you really think Hitler will invade the United States?" asked a Senate press gallery reporter.

"Yes—and again no," was the answer. "But that is not the most imminint peril."

To what are you referring?" asked a London correspondent.

"For one thing to the fashion scene. Look at the birds' nests women are wearing on their heads. Look at the new long length jackets designed to turn every short skirted—and especially short legged women, into a walking silo. And especially look at the increasing popularity of this silly custom of twin costumes for husbands and wives and for girls and their boy friends."

Twin Costumes Lead to Reno

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a love counselor for The Economic Review, "don't you think that dressing alike will really draw husbands and wives closer together?"

"Certainly not" was the reply." "It will make them so sick of each other that I predict an acute rise in the divorce rate if the practise is continued."

"How do you get that?" asked a vital statistics columnist.

"Well, the husband and wife who dress alike and thus advertise their marital status to the world are going to find themselves more and more ostracized by other people. I ask you, what woman would pay any attention at a social gathering to a man dressed in a twin costume to his wife's? He would have even less social life on an individual basis than a man who wears a wedding ring.

"And what man would have much interest in a woman who was advertising all over the place by a twin costume that either she or her husband was a doormat without any initiative or originality?

"It was bad enough" continued Mrs. DeGoofey, "when older and younger sisters, and mothers and daughters had to have twin outfits. But for men and women to wear them—well that is not only silly and conspicuous but downright dangerous in times like these.

"You mean Hitler might not approve?" asked a publicity man for a large oil company.

"On the contrary, I think he would approve. I think the custom is a direct step toward the regimentation of personality and I think he is back of the whole thing.

"Why intelligent people should be taking up such a dictator-inspired custom I can't see. why, good heavens, we already have too many people in this country looking alike as it is. Take the permanent wave and the make-up bar. See what they have done for women! I defy you to look at six women emerging from any beauty shop and be able to tell them apart.

The Same Furs, The Same Faces

"Then take furs. What do they do for women but turn them into regiments? There are ones with the silver fox scarves! All alike as two peas in a pod! And the ones with the mink coats! Now for some strange reason all women in mink coats seems to wear the same kind of expensive shoes, hats, gloves etc., and worse still, all have the same faces. Just line up the faultlessly groomed, well nourished mink and sable coated brigades emerging from benfits or musicals and—well only their mothers could identify them.

"Then there's the cocktail set. All women look exactly alike at cocktail parties in their 'little black dresses', their rhinestone lizards, etc., and their little veiled hats. In fact everywhere I go I find it increasingly difficult to tell one woman from another. I am always addressing Mrs. Tinfoil as Mrs. Van Tinsel, and vice versa. Now for men to be drawn into the plot forebodes a dangerous trend."

"What action do you intend to take Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a campaign columnist.

"I will explain futher later. Right now I have an appointment to go shopping. I simply havn't a thing for spring, and I can't wait another day to get something in navy and white with a little flower hat."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy, 14, Baffles Mother by His Amiable Plodding Through School, Which Results in Failing Marks When He Has High 'I.Q.;' How Stir His Ambition?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My son, 14, a lovable and perfectly normal boy in all other respects, has plodded through eight years of school with a very peculiar attitude toward study and scholastic accomplishments. Two years ago, when we moved from New York to Washington, I thought perhaps his attitude would change—with the new system, new teachers, etc. To be specific, he was enrolled in Junior High School, instead of the seventh grade. But alas and alack, his marks were worse, and finally he failed to make a passing average this last semester.

He has always been in what is known as the "fast class"—which leads me to believe his I. Q. is high, since his grades don't warrant it. He shows no reluctance to attend school, nor to spend a certain amount of time on home work—but, on the other hand, he shows no enthusiasm for, nor pride in, his work.

He has talked over his future with me and is sure he wants to be an aeronautical engineer. It has been pointed out to him that such a course is expensive and requires much study, and that the money to put him through school is the only thing that can be furnished; that he must do the remainder for himself. Next semester, he will be working for his high school credits and must have a "C" average to enter college. Now, my problem is how to get him up to that mark. Everything I know has been given a trial—ranging from helping him, putting him entirely on his own, holding out special inducements in the way of summer vacations, etc., and even conspiring with his teachers.

We have no man in the family to help. For ten years, I have been mother and father, bread winner and adviser to my son. There must be something wrong with my method, to make his attitude what it is, and I would like some suggestions on how to cope with the situation. Sincerely, MRS. U. D.

Boy's Mental Lethargy Holds Deeper Meaning

DEAR MRS. U. D.: Here we have a boy of 14; an only child—who has been intimately companioned since his fourth year only (or chiefly) by his mother. Under her supervision and domestic tutelage, he has developed into a lovable, tactable youngster—so docile and manageable, indeed, that she has been spared many of the typical worries of parenthood, such as are usually occasioned by a robustly enterprising child's predilection for "trying anything once."

In other words, it appears that we may have here a boy who has been so "gentled" by a preponderantly feminine influence as to have lost (at least temporarily) the characteristically masculine approach to life—which is essentially aggressive, assertive, adventurous and keenly competitive. Highly intelligent children are unconsciously and extraordinarily imitative of their elders' behavior—and it may be that your son has unconsciously patterned his fundamental attitudes toward life after yours And, granting that you are typicaly feminine, these attitudes would be more passive than aggressive; more tentative than assertive; more conservative than adventurous; and more concessive (in the sense of yielding, or giving way) than competitive.

Thus, it is entirely possible that his pleasantly apathetic attitude toward his work; his affable disinterest in heroic effort aimed at outstanding accomplishment; his mildly contented acceptance of an "also-ran's" role in life, are all the result (both direct and indirect) of his having "no man in the family" who would have set him an irresistible example of dynamic "go-getting;" and simultaneously and matter-of-factly encourged exhorted and even "kicked him up-tairs" into a comparably purposeful, successful performance.

Given—as in this case—a boy of superior mentality and excellent character, who nevertheless is a mediocre student with an unmistakeably "passive" attitude toward all tasks set before him, parent and teacher have a knotty problem to solve, in diagnosing and correcting his difficulty. Supposing it is true, as suggested here, that the boy suffers from lack of needed and healthful masculine "influencing" —the question arises as to how to compensate for that lack in the home, in such a way as to revive and invigorate his latent (and blunted) male assertiveness.

So far, you have been coping with "symptoms" rather than with "causes" of the boy's intellectual inertia. And his intellectual inertia probably is part-and-parcel expression of his social inertia—which is to say, his dutiful "good son's" abstinence from aggressive participation in the rough-and-tumble of contemporary activities on the school ground, in the neighborhood, etc. In his efforts to meet your complete approval, he may have long since relinquished all opportunities to exercise and develope a healthful assertiveness—such as you would like to see him display in the scholastic arena.

For many reasons, this kind of problem deserves the attention of a specialist in adolescent psychology—such a specialist as you will find at the Child Guidance Clinic (serving yonugsters up to the age of about 17) of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia Road Northwest, Washington, D. C. In my opinion, your son needs to come under the influence of some understanding, sympathetic, inspiring masculine aegis—if he is to achieve the masterly full use of his considerable (but dormant) intelligence and energy. And you need to learn—from a scientifically trained source—how to revise your own attitude, in order to cooperate wisely in reclaiming him from his unnaturally quiescent performance. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Clean Tools Aid In Housekeeping

A dirty tool cannot do a clean job. This is particularly true of the brushes, dust cloths, mops and other articles that are the housewife's tools in her daily occupation of cleaning the home.

The dust pan and brush, the push broom, and the other tools that are put into use daily should have a thorough soap and water cleansing once a week. Precede the washing of brushes by shaking out as much loose dust as possible, then swish them in a pail or tub of lively suds. Rinse several times by swishing in clear water. Shake out excess moisture, and dry it in a sunny spot with the bristle side upwards.

Etiquette Slips Stamp You

WHAT A success she thought her party would be—with some of the nicest crowd in town attending! But eyebrows go up as soon as she starts introducing people.

It's not good form among the younger set to introduce girls and men with "Miss Smith, I'd like to present Mr. Jones." Sophisticated young people prefer to say simply "Mary Smith, this is Bob Jones"—dropping the "Miss" and "Mister."

To be unaware of such little etiquette points of course places a barrier between you and the people you'd like to know. And just "trying to be polite" isn't enough. You are apt to do the over-elaborate thing, make yourself conspicuous.

Taking a beau to a party, you try to introduce him to everyone present. Correct to introduce him to your hostess, let her see that he meets the others.

And faced with the question "To kiss or not to kiss?" she doesn't lose her poise. Usually she avoids the dark corners that cause difficult moments. But if she must refuse outright she does so pleasantly, in a way not to hurt his feelings.

You'll notice, too, that it's always the girl who knows her p's and q's who goes over big with men. Entering the movies, she precedes her beau.

Mayflower Society Holds Reception

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Former Representative Maurice Thatcher, of Kentucky, governor of the Washington Society of the Mayflower, headed the receiving line, with Mrs. Thatcher, yesterday afternoon at the reception given by the society in the historic clubhouse of the Arts Club, 2017 I Street.

Mrs. Hersey Munroe, chairman of the reception and hostess of the afternoon, welcomed the guests as they arrived, and Col. Francis A. Pope made the introductions. In the line with the governor of the society and his wife were Deputy Gov. Frank B. Steele and Mrs. Steele, Senator and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine; Representative and Mrs. Charles Plumley, of Vermont, and Representative and Mrs. Foster Stearns, of New Hampshire.

Representative Stearns is deputy governor general of the national society. Mrs. Plumley is a member of the Vermont branch of the organization. Her husband, although he attended yesterday only as an "in-law" of the Mayflower Society, is an active member of the Society of Pilgrims, and insists his ancestors stood on Plymouth Rock to welcome Mrs. Plumley's when they stepped ashore.

Senator Brewster, who is a direct descendant of Love Brewster, one of the sons of the illustrious Elder Brewster, found at the reception three other descendants of the same line to claim a kinship to him. They were the Misses Edna Scott Smith, Mabel Scott Smith and their sister, Mrs. Ralph Werner.

The auditorium of the Arts Club, where the reception was held, was bright with bouquets of snapdragons and gladioli. The tea table, set at one end, was appointed with a lace cloth, a centerpiece of red and white gladioli and red candles in silver candelabra. Those who alternated in pouring tea and coffee were Mrs. Gaius Brumbaugh, Mrs. Warren Emley, Mrs. Brinkley E. Callicott, Mrs. Bertha Robertson, Mrs. Pearl Shaffer, Mrs. William Theophilus and Mrs. John Freoit.

There was music by Ethel Pyne, soprano; Helen Belt, violinist, and Mrs. Emery Ozabal, pianist.

Among the many guests were the former Minister to Czecho-Slovakia and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, Judge Advocate General of the Army, and his daughter, Mrs. Frederick D. Sempich, who is here from Hawaii; Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the League of Republican Women, of which Mrs. Thatcher is vice president; the Second Secretary of the Venezuelan Legation, Don Juan Lecuna, and Senora de Lecuna; Senora de Baron, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy; the former President of Panama and Senora Alfaro, the Minister of Honduras and Senora Caceras; Senora Mario Julio, of Puerto Rico.

Also present were Col. and Mrs. Edward Starling, Col. Enrique Benitez, Mrs. M. E. Woodward and Mrs. Samuel B. Woodridge, both members of the national board of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots; Mrs. William D. Wrightson and her daughter, Miss Phyllis Wrightson; Mrs. Robert Bull, Mr. and Mrs. Z. Lewis Dalby, Miss Sophia Casey, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Horace M. Sale of Tickets Opened Here For Phantom Navy Relief Ball

The Phantom Navy Relief Ball is being sponsored and directed by a real and active agency—the District of Columbia Auxiliary of the Navy Relief Society.

While the ball is to be held in spirit only, the money realized by the sale of the tickets will be a tangible aid to this society, which depends upon it for the continuance of its work among Navy enlisted personnel and their families.

The Society had its beginning at the time of the Spanish-American War, when help was sorely needed for the families of the men killed or wounded on the battleship Maine. It was incorporated in 1904 under the leadership of Admiral George Dewey and Mr. Moody, the Secretary of the Navy.

The original aim of the society was "to collect funds and provide relief for indigent widows, orphans and mothers of officers and enlisted men of the United States Navy and Marine Corps; to aid in securing employment for them, and to furnish educational facilities for such orphan children." Afterward an amendment was made to permit aid "to be extended in special cases of distress to persons of the regular Navy and Marine Corps or to members of their families."

The D. C. Auxiliary to the Navy Relief Society, whose president is Mrs. George Pettengill, has worked energetically to take care of the cases which have come to its attention. Other members of the board are Mrs. Harold R. Stark, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, second vice president; Mrs. William D. Chandler, secretary; Capt. Julius Furer, treasurer and chairman of the hospital committee; Mrs. Marshall Dana, vice chairman, and Mrs. Ray Spear, chairman of the relief committee.

The major work of the society is making loans for the hospitalization and medical care of men's families. Usually these loans are repaid in full by allottment, but in some cases involving heavy expenses, direct gifts are made.

Editor Sees New Deal Labor Policy Cooling

Since the "Little Steel" strike the Administration has played a rear guard action against its labor reforms program, I. F. Stone, editor of The Nation, charged yesterday in a talk before the study group of the League of Women Shoppers at the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot.

Talking on "The Administration and Labor Under the Defense Program—Promises and Performance," he said this charge was borne out by such moves as personnel changes on the NLRB which reduced the militancy of the Administration's labor policy.

Gains made by labor in the past two years should be held, Mr. Stone declared.

The cooperation of workers in a crisis is a great asset to a nation, he said, adding: "We must win labor completely because workers and small farmers have the real stake against fascism and are our most dependable allies against fascism."

"This is an age of mechanized warfare, which is a war of factories," he continued. "It is the workers of an industry that see it as a unit and that are interested in running it at full capacity and maximum efficiency, as opposed to the owner who is interested primarily in the balance sheet."

He pointed out that mobilization in this country, since it is on a voluntary basis rather than on a basis of force, as in Germany, makes it of primary importance to keep labor's gains.

Mrs. Warren Sharfman presided at the meeting.

Congressional Club To Honor Mrs. Marvin

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin will be guest of honor of the Congressional Club at its meeting Friday and will discuss recent plays and present excerpts from "Life With Father."

Farewell Fetes Planned For Mrs. Lewis Compton

By Hope Ridings Miller

"OH, BUT I'M CERTAINLY going to miss Washington . . . and the Navy," said Mrs. Lewis Compton, wife of the retiring Assistant Secretary of the Navy, when I talked with her yesterday.

And Washington certainly will miss her. One of the most attractive and most gracious official hostesses around these parts, she has many friends here. And just as many casual acquaintances have hoped that somehow, in the hurry and bustle of the Capital whirl, they would get to know her better.

Hope Ridings Miller

Mr. Compton, who has been laid low with influenza for several weeks, is due to be released from the Naval hospital the latter part of this week. Early next month he and Mrs. Compton will return to New Jersey, where he will serve as State finance officer.

The Comptons have a home in Metuchen, N. J., not far from Trenton, but since it is being redecorated, they probably will spend some time with his brother and her sister, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Compton, in Woodbridge, N. J. No, I haven't got it wrong. Mrs. Compton's sister married her husband's brother, so it's all a family affair.

Returning to New Jersey with the Comptons will be their son, James Vincent. Their daughter, Camille, is in boarding school in Burlington, N. J.

Because Mr. Compton is just now recovering, the calendar of farewell fetes for them has been cut to a minimum. There will be several parties for Mrs. Compton in the next few days, however; and yesterday Mrs. James Craig Peacock led off the list with a luncheon in her home in Chevy Chase.

Ranking guest was Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General. From the Congressional circle came Mrs. Luther Johnson, Mrs. John E. Rankin, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Mrs. Richard M. Duncan and Mrs. William D. Byron. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper was also among those present, as were Mrs. Frank Crowther, Mrs. Emil Schram, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Frank J. Wideman, Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, Mrs. Louis B. Montfort and Mrs. Curtis Walker, who will entertain at a luncheon for Mrs. Compton Friday at the Chevy Chase Club.

ANOTHER CAPITALITE who will soon be leaving Washington is Mrs. Charles Baker, who will be off Monday to join Capt. Baker at Bremerton, Wash. Among farewell fetes on her current calendar was the small luncheon given in her honor yesterday by Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor. Guests were Mrs. Alan G. Kirk, Mrs. Robert Lovett, Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Walter Lippmann and Mrs. Keith Kane.

Mrs. Baker is planning to go West by motor, and in charting her course she has found she will have to make an extended tour of the country to get to Washington State. Friends have advised her to go South before starting West in order to avoid snow-covered highways, so she will travel through Texas and California before heading North to meet her husband.

SEVERAL DINNERS accented last night's social round. Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman entertained a small company at the first in a series of parties they are planning this season. Ranking guests were Senator and Mrs. Robert La Follette and others in the company were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank T. Hines, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Manly and Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover.

Mrs. John R. Williams was hostess at an informal dinner in honor of her granddaughter, Miss Nancy Leiter, and the latter's fiance, Thomas Clagett. Several out-of-town guests who are already here for the wedding on Saturday were present, including Miss Marion Oates, of New York. Also in the company were members of the wedding party.

Expected to arrive today for the final round of pre-nuptial parties is Colin Campbell, of New York, cousin of the bride-elect and brother of Miss Audrey Campbell, who will be one of the attendants.

Margaret Graham Townsend Is Engaged to John B. Rogers

MISS MARGARET GRAHAM TOWNSEND

Hardly news to Washington society, since it was first reported in a Post society column last December, is the formal announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Effingham Lawrence Townsend, of Washington, of the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Graham Townsend, to John Bond Rogers. The latter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander Rogers, of New York, formerly of Boston.

Miss Townsend is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Townsend, of Philadelphia, and the late Mr. and Mrs. David Edward Graham, of Danville, Va. She is the great niece and godchild of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, of Washington. Following her graduation from the Holton Arms School, she made her debut in the 1938 season at a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend at their home here.

Mr. Rogers is a grandson of the late Col. and Mrs. W. Mulliken Rogers, of Plymouth, N. H., and the late Charles H. Bond, philanthropist, and Mrs. Bond, of Swampscott, Mass. He is a direct descendant on his father's side of Gov. Bradstreet, of Massachusetts, and John Rogers, president of Harvard University. His great uncle, the late William Jewett Tucker, was president of Dartmouth College. He attended Middlesex School in Concord, Mass., and is a graduate of the Hun School at Princeton.

Mr. Rogers has recently completed instruction in the candidate school of the 212th Coast Artillery antiaircraft service and definite plans will be made for the wedding after his assignment to a post.

About the Town

Flowers at Mrs. Justice Robert's teas are all sent down from her farm in Pennsylvania . . . Dr. Hu-Shih collects college degrees. South African Minister can tell you the name of any bird . . . Senator George Aiken and his secretary are both airplane pilots . . . Representative Thomas Eliot is a baseball fan in the season and can quote you the batting average of players 40 years ago . . . Former Justice Louis Brandeis continues to live in starkly simple style so he can give away most of his money to charity.

AIR COMMODORE PIRIE, Air attache of the now crowded British Embassy, has four assistants, three of them were fliers with the R. A. F.; the fourth is a technical expert. Latest to arrive is Squadron Leader R. A. Mills, who fought air battles against the Germans up until Christmas.

WITH ENGLAND'S famed Grand National canceled this year society's top racing event will be the famous Maryland Hunt Cup. The Forty-eighth annual running of the steeplechase, one of the most hazardous in the world, has been set for April 26. As usual people will come from all over the country to see it, many in private planes which are parked in a field near the course. The Hunt Cup will again take place on the estate of J. W. Y. Martin in Worthington Valley near Baltimore. One of the oldest turf fixtures in the country, the race will be followed by a Hunt Ball at the Alcazar.

OVER LUNCHEON the other day, Marion Shouse and Mary Wilson were discussing plans for John Mason Brown's lecture March 1, "Broadway in Review." The critic's talk will be followed by tea, the proceeds going to the Frontier Nursing Service.

Both Marion and Mary go down several times a year to serve as couriers in the service. Since the mountaineers have an annual cash income of about $37, they are unable to afford medical attention. Describing these Kentucky folk at lunch the other day, Marion said that they speak pure Elizabethan English. For example, on being asked her name, a woman is apt to reply "Mistress Smith."

Many of the nurses are English and were called back for duty in the war. So Mrs. Mary Breckenridge, founder and director of the service, is raising money to train new ones. For the Washington benefit, Rosemary Merrill will round up a group of debutantes to serve as ushers.

Kitty Hill Hostess at Shower And Tea for Marcy Morgan

Miss Kitty Hill, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, was hostess at a linen shower and tea yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Marcy Morgan. The latter will be married Friday to William Winthrop Blodget 3d, of Providence, R. I. The news will come as a surprise to Washington, as no announcement of the engagement has been made.

The prospective bride is the daughter of Thomas Morgan, jr., who is well known in Washington civic and business circles. She attended Holton Arms School and Edgewood Park School in Briarcliff, N. Y.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock at St. Thomas' Church and will be a quiet one. John Blodgett, brother of the bridegroom, will be best man. After their marriage the couple will live in Alexandria.

Mr. Blodgett is the son of Mrs. Louise Q. Blodgett. He is a direct descendant of John Winthrop, first Governor of Massachusetts, and is a grandson of the late Edward W. Blodgett, Chief Justice of the Rhode Ieland Superior Court. Mr. Blodgett attended Rhode Island State College.

Senora de Espil Fetes Daughter

Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, was hostess at a small tea yesterday for her daughter, Miss Louise Stillwell, and her fiance, Randall Hagner. There were about 20 young people present, all close friends of the young couple.

The engagement of Miss Stillwell to Mr. Hagner was announced yesterday. They will be married March 14.

Miss Huidekoper And McIlvaines Hold Housewarming

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson McIlvaine and Miss Page Huidekoper gave a cocktail party yesterday at the house in Georgetown which they share. It was in the nature of a housewarming, as all three moved in only recently. The hostesses wore black, Mrs. McIlvaine a velvet dress, and Miss Huidekoper a suit with a white blouse.

Guest of honor was Amory Lawrence, who left last night for Texas. He has joined the Cavalry. Another reason for the party was that Mrs. McIlvaine was celebrating her birthday.

Among the guests was Miss Huidekoper's sister, Rosalind, of Clarke County, Va., who is here for a few days. Others were Mrs. Beverly Mason and her brother, Dulany Randolph; George Agnew, who has taken a house with Lloyd Symington; Miss Emily Davis, Miss Sheila Morrison-Bell and several others.

Brazil Embassy Fete to Benefit Red Cross

When Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, decides to do something she does it with the verve and imagination of a Carmen Miranda. The latest bee in her bonnet is an American Red Cross benefit—of the supercolossal variety. Yesterday afternoon she invited a few people in for tea (or cocktails) to discuss plans for the fashion show.

Several days before March 27—when the show will be held—virtually all the furniture will be moved out of the second floor of the spacious embassy. Small tables will be arranged about the rooms—cafe style. Powers models will display Bonwit Teller clothes and, Sydney's Orchestra will play for dancing. The affair will be from 5 until 8 o'clock. Tickets, incidentally, are $10 apiece.

Yesterday Senhora de Martins was smartly turned out in a dull yellow wool gown with two matching vevlet bows pinned in her black hair. Pouring tea was Senhora Konder, wife of the Minister Plenipotentiary of the embassy. To accent her simple beige jersey frock she wore a necklace and belt of brown beads—with a metallic luster. Senhora de Guimaraes was assisting generally and Senhora de Gouthier wore a bright gold hat atop her high coiffure.

Mrs. George Garrett, swathed in mink, sat on a divan and discussed the plans for the show with Miss Mabel Boardman. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., one of the patronesses, was an early arrival. Baroness de Gruben, in chic black, wore a cunning hat trimmed with two huge pink roses. Countess van Rechteren Limpurg topped off her black ensemble with a lemon yellow felt turban. Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson wore a coffee-colored straw hat resembling an English schoolboy's hat. Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., was there, as were Mrs. Claude Pepper, with a blue jacket over her black frock; Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Mrs. Herbert Feis, Miss Ann Squire and many others.

SymphonyStars Given Party

Gay and informal was the small supper party given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward at their home, 3005 O Street. It followed the Philadelphia Orchestra concert and guests of honor were Enid Szantho, Metropolitan Opera contralto; Edna Phillips, American harpist, and Eugene Ormandy, noted conductor, who were stars on the symphony program.

Sharing honors with the artists was Harl McDonald, famous American composer, whose work was featured at the concert.

Among the other guests were several persons from out of town, including Samuel R. Rosenbaum, husband of Miss Phillips and vice president of the Philadelphia Orchestra Association.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

In these days, when most visitors to Washington arrive with deadly purpose written on their faces and briefcases in their hands, it is nice to meet someone who has come to the Capital just because it is a pleasant place, and to renew old friendships. Such a visitor is Mrs. Samuel Clay, of Richmond, Va., who, with her sister, Mrs. Nelson Hopkins, and her daughter, Susan Clay, has taken an apartment at the Fairfax. Mrs. Clay's late husband was a British diplomat and a number of friends who have been on post with the Clays in different parts of the world are now stationed in Washington. Among the number are Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg of the Netherlands Legation and the George Boncescos, until recently of the Rumanian Legation.

The other afternoon Jack Segar, a fellow Virginian and an old friend of the Clays, gave a cocktail party in their honor at his home on Hillyer Place. An accordion player wandered about among the guests rippling off any and all tunes requested of him, and his music, heard as the door opened to each arrival, made everyone feel gay from the start.

TWO CONTRASTING beauties who were toasts of the occasion were the red-haired guest of honor, Susan Clay, and Lady Elizabeth Hofmansthal, a ravishing brunette. Lady Elizabeth and her husband, Raimund Hofmansthal, have been house guests of Baron and Baroness Stackelberg for a few days and were accompanied to the party by their hosts and by Baroness Stackelberg's aunt, Mrs. Martin Vogel.

The Minister of Finland and his attractive wife were the center of an animated group and were being questioned on the talents and virtues of their baby son. The Joseph Noels were being welcomed back to the Capital, where his family are old residents. He is a captain in the Army now and will be stationed in Washington.

Two lovely blondes who will soon be wearing orange blossoms were Rose Chatfield-Taylor and Peggy Townsend. The latter wore a white veil floating from her black hat and someone suggested that she was trying to get used to wearing a bridal veil.

ALSO PRESENT were Mr. and Mrs. Macgill James, Mr. and Mrs. John Potter—he is studying at the John oPtter—he is studying at the Foreign Service School—Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, accompanied by his brother, Count Adolf van Rechteren Limpurg; Senor and Senhora Hugo Gouthier, of the Brazilian Embassy, and Capt. and Mrs. Karl Wessel, of the Swedish Legation.

Other guests of Mr. Segar were Eleanor Meem, Marie vom Rath, Mary Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Neville Godwin, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moulton and Mme. Boncesco. Also Dick and Sterling Bolling, Jimmie Parks, Bill Van Allen, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Jock Merriman, Billy Mitchell, Bob Cleveland, Rufus Johnson and Wilfred Buckland.

MRS. MARION WARBURG has returned to Washington after a trip to Jamaica and the Dominican Republic. In Cuidad Trujillo Mrs. Warburg visited the United States Minister and Mrs. Robert Scotten and took a motor trip with them to Haiti. Mrs. Warburg reports that the Scottens like their new post very much and that they sent messages to all their friends in Washington.

George Renshard has returned to duty at the State Department after a recent assignment in Canada.

Countess de Limur returned from New York in time to prepare for the benefit tea and fashion show which will take place at Anderson House this afternoon at 4 o'clock. She has asked me to say that tickets can be had at the door of Anderson House as well as at local hotels.

More Parties Scheduled to Aid Blood Bank

THE STAGE IS SET—Final arrangements for the annual military ball of the District Department of the American Legion were reported yesterday to William Hargrave, department commander, and Helen McCabe, department president of the legion auxiliary. Looking over their shoulders at the program are (left to right) Helen Zaruba, Mary McCabe and Isabell Daugherty, who are sure to be present at the ball Saturday night in the Mayflower Hotel. During an intermission, the legionnaires will present to the managing editor of The Post, Alexander F. Jones, the American Legion's share in the campaign to aid the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital

And still they come—more announcements of benefit parties whose proceeds will go toward maintenance of the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank.

Yesterday the Ladies of Charity completed plans for a card party to be held next Tuesday in St. Paul's parish hall, 1413 V Street Northwest. At the same time, Jacob Blake, manager of Colonial Village, announced a dance will be held in the village's community house on February 28.

The public is invited to attend both affairs, as well as all of the other card parties, dances and entertainments which are yet to be held in connection with the third annual blood bank campaign.

Completely in the spirit of the blood bank campaign were 97 small boys and girls who danced last night at the Southeast Branch of the Washington Boys' Club. The small admission fees netted $5.97. High-point of the evening came when the winners of a dance contest, Buddy Utley and his girl "Jackie" (last name unknown), returned their prize box of candy to officials so the purchase price might go to the blood and serum fund.

Outstanding event today is the Washington Bridge League card party at the Shoreham Hotel, scheduled to begin at 8 p. m. The league has been a sponsor of the blood bank since its establishment in 1939. Its president is Thomas Hamlin.

Paul E. Golden is secretary and game director, Dr. C. C. McDonnell, vice president, and David C. Elliott, treasurer.

Other bridge benefits yet to be held include those of the Federal Bridge League and the Colonial Village Bridge Club. Both are scheduled for next Monday night, the former at the Wardman Park Hotel and the other at the Community House.

Tonight will be "charity begins at home night" at Children's Hospital, when the nursing staff gives its annual dance for the blood and serum bank at the institution. The party will be held in the hospital's recreation hall, with Miss Ashby Taylor, superintendent of nurses, in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. J. W. Vanarsdell is chairman of the Ladies of Charity card party to be held next Tuesday. Mrs. Frank V. Schwoerer is president of the group, which sponsored a similar affair in 1940 to raise funds for the project. Mrs. Carl Jahn and Mrs. George V. McAlear, vice presidents, also are assisting with arrangements.

Washingtonians and suburbanites who prefer to give their own parties may obtain souvenir tickets by calling at The Washington Post, although this step is not essential. The main thing is to forward to the cashier of The Post, when your party is over, the proceeds, which will be turned over to Children's Hospital at the end of the drive early in March.

Less Than 20% Of Plants Now On One Shift

By the Associated Press

A study of "weekend blackouts" in vital defense industries showed yesterday that of 394 plants, 116 were working six days a week and 68 were on a seven-day basis.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which made the survey, found also that less than 20 per cent of the plants studied were using only one shift of workers a day, and that 60 per cent of the employes in the surveyed industries worked an average of 9.1 hours overtime.

The bureau's study was undertaken in mid-December at the request of the National Defense Commission. About that time William S. Knudsen, now director of the Office of Production Management, was complaining of a lag in defense production and attributing part of it to a "blackout" in operations from Friday night to Monday morning.

The study covered such key defense industries as machine tools, machine-tool accessories, shipbuilding, firearms, ammunition, electrical machinery, brass, bronze and copper products, aluminum, smelting and refining, explosives and engines, exclusive of aircraft.

In addition to the 116 plants on a six-day week and the 68 on a seven-day, the bureau's report showed 142 working five days a week and 68 working 5½ days.

The bureau found that the average amount of overtime for workers who put in extra hours was more than 11 hours a week in shipbuilding, firearms and machine tools; between 10 and 11 hours in machine-tolo accessories and engines; from 6 to 9 hours in brass, bronze and copper products, aluminum manufacturing, electrical machinery and ammunition, and slightly less than 5 hours in explosives, smelting and refining.

. . . HAVE YOU ANY WOOL?"—It hasn't much, but what it has, Harvie Donn, 7, is sure it will keep. Harvie, who lives at 4800 Eighth Street Northwest, displayed his three-weeks old lamb, Inky, yesterday at the Bernard School's pet show denounced.

Incorporated early in 1937, the health association opened its doors on downtown I Street in November of that year and has been operating since, now having approximately 3,000 Federal employes on its rolls.

When the trial begins its third week in District Court this morning, Prosecutors John Henry Lewin and Grant W. Kelleher will start reading to the jury a stack of documents, including excerpts from the medical society's minutes and scores of letters to and from the American Medical Association.

Lewin estimated last night that the Government, seeking to convict the organized doctors of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act, will rest its case "in about two weeks."

Opposing counsel clashed heatedly yesterday, both when they were arguing the admissibility of the four volumes of minutes and when Col. Jones, who retired from the Army Medical Corps in 1936, was on the stand.

Lewin, at one time, characterized the defendants as "a gang of powerful men" who were impelled by "hatred and bitterness" to "drive their competitors out of the field, expose them, take away their prestige, humble them, drive them out of the hospitals."

It was in a letter, dated March 27, 1937, from Gen. Ireland—retired Surgeon General of the Army—to Dr. W. D. Cutter, one of the defendants, that Col. Jones was described as having said G. H. A. was a step toward state medicine—that is, Government control of doctors and hospitals.

Gen. Ireland wrote:

"The facts below just came to my knowledge and I am going to drop them on your desk. It may be old stuff to you people around headquarters.

"The early part of the week a couple of men from the HOLC visited the Surgeon General of the Army to say that they wanted to obtain the services of a doctor to look out for the health of their personnel, which, incidentally, is quite large.

"After the consultation, the Surgeon General (Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, now retired) asked Col. Glenn Jones, a retired medical officer, to visit these people. After this visit, which lasted for a period of two or three hours, Jones telephoned to the Surgeon General to the effect that this was nothing but an entering wedge to the establishment of state medicine and so far as he could make out the Twentieth Century Finance Corporation, of New York City, was going to pay the expenses of this so-called medical care for the personnel of HOLC.

"Needless to say, Jones and the Surgeon General are dropping it like a hot cake.

"Just treat this information as though it blew into your window as I don't want to be the person to embarrass the Surgeon General, if there should be any embarrassment. Some of the doctors in Washington are going to be wised up."

Dr. Cutter was then, as he is now, secretary of the A. M. A. council on medical education and hospitals. Group Health Association, expanded since to accommodate employes of more than a score of Federal bureaus, was originally founded to care for HOLC workers.

The "Twentieth Century Finance Corporation" mentioned in the letter is the Twentieth Century Fund which, together with HOLC, helped the medical cooperative financially in getting under way.

Col. Jones, who said he is now a surgeon employed by the Southern Railway, testified that early in 1937 he was sounded out by HOLC officials to become medical head of G. H. A. A $10,000 salary was spoken of, but not offered directly, he declared.

Interested at first in the proposition, he said he began outlining an organization, only to cool on the project after hearing several members of the local medical society criticize the prepayment, group practice scheme.

Dr. A. C. Christie told him, said the witness, that the District Medical Society disapproved of G. H. A. and could not be expected to assist in its formation.

"It made me skeptical of the idea," Col. Jones told the jury.

Subsequently, he added, he declined the directorship principally because "the medical society had indicated its unwillingness to participate, thus automatically denying the best medical care to subscribers."

The witness declared that he did not know of the letter which Gen. Ireland wrote to Dr. Cutter. While disowning the remark about G. H. A. being an "entering wedge" to Government control of medicine, Col. Jones admitted on the stand that such an enterprise, if not backed by the organized medical profession, probably would lead to that end.

Other witnesses heard yesterday were called only for the purpose of identifying documents which the Government will present to the jury, beginning today.

Green Denies A. F. L. Raises Food Prices

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 18.—The American Federation of Labor denied through its president today charges by a Federal official that union policies are increasing food prices.

William Green, A. F. of L. president, said a detailed reply to charges by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold was being prepared for submission to a Congressional committee investigating defense labor problems and declared:

"We are amazed at the testimony offered by Mr. Arnold because we are of the opinion that he has mixed his facts—if any.

"The increased cost of services and products which he alleges are attributable to other causes."

Green added the opinion that Arnold "has shown an antagonistic attitude toward labor," particularly in "his prosecution of labor unions under the antitrust law."

Letter to Roosevelt

Chicago, Feb. 18 (AP)—Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said today he had asked President Roosevelt that "no pressure upon the Department of Justice be allowed to interfere with or to discontinue any proceedings against labor which charges any substantial violation of law."

In a letter to the President, O'Neal said accounts of a proposed conference between Assistant Attorney General Arnold and William Green indicated the purpose of the conference would be to induce Arnold to discontinue antitrust suits against labor organizations.

"It is important that no pressure upon the Department of Justice be allowed to interfere with or to discontinue any proceeding against labor which charges any substantial violation of law," O'Neal wrote. "Instead, the department should be encouraged to proceed against all such violations by labor, industry, agriculture or anybody else."

"The illegal restraint of trade constitute one of the major causes of the disparity between agriculture, industry and labor and are a heavy penalty on the consumers."

The Wonderful Wizard of Ooze

Newsmen who have been tramping through a sea of mud at Fort Meade for the last two weeks have a new name for Maj. Gen. Reckord, Twenty-ninth Division commander.

Eyeing the bog, a Baltimore correspondent declared: "If Gen. Reckord can get 10,000 men in here by Friday he'll be the Wizard of Ooze."

Bessie Was No Lady

The automobile of J. H. Kelly, Camp Springs, Md., collided with a cow near Silver Hill, Md., yesterday. The car was damaged, but it was able to run. The cow was knocked down but got up and, with an air of indifference, went to graze in a pasture nearby. Police ruled the encounter a draw.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

160,000 to Be Hired Before June 30

A survey of Government agencies revealed that 160,000 new employes will be hired between February 1 and the end of the fiscal year on June 30. A turnover of 40,000 also is estimated which would swell the number of new employes to 200,000 in the five-month period. The number of new employes that will be brought to Washington up to June 30 isn't expected to exceed 11,000, which would make a total of roughly 170,000 departmental employes here and an over-all total, including Naval Yard employes and field office representatives, of more than 190,000 Federal workers in the District. The great bulk of the increase here will be accounted for by clerical employes in the War and Navy Departments. Office of Production Management is expected to hire between 500 and 700 and other agencies in the defense commission setup are expected to hire several hundred others. Public Buildings Administration, Defense Homes, Maritime Commission, Reconstruction Finance and a number of others concerned with National defense also will build up their staffs.

George Kennedy, Wage-Hour official, and his secretary, Marcella Franke, each have contributed 20 nickels to a pool "for the prevention of cussing." Here's how it works: If a cuss word slips off George's tongue, and if it's heard by his secretary, she takes a jitney from the pool. It works both ways, of course. Late yesterday George was a nickel up on his secretary.

Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday added $1,000,000 to WPA's administrative fund for the remainder of the 1941 fiscal year thereby saving the jobs, perhaps only temporarily, of 1,800 WPA administrative employes. If the House figure prevails in conference, the 1,800, many of them here, will have to be dismissed. The number of WPA administrative employes has been reduced steadily. In 1939, there was an average of 36,000 employes. The number slumped to 26,500 in 1940, and during the 1941 fiscal year the number has sunk to 21,300 which officials claim is an absolute minimum under the present program.

Promotion Hearing

The automatic promotion plan for Federal employes has cleared its first hurdle. The House Civil Service Committee yesterday agreed to start hearings on March 11 on the various bills that propose to increase employe salaries. The committee reported out a bill that would permit Mount Vernon and a score of other postoffices in the country to have legal postmasters. The present law requires the postmaster be chosen from the place where the postoffice is located. No one meets the requirement at a handful of places in the country like Mount Vernon.

Chairman Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee today will introduce a bill to amend the Retirement Act that is understood to have the support of most employe groups. His bill would lower optional retirement to 60 after 30 years service and provide compulsory retirement at 70. The bill will include many other benefits, but it would raise the employe contribution from 3½ per cent to 5 per cent.

Comptroller General Lindsey Warren will appoint a committee to review plans and procedures at GAO . . . Civil Service Commiission will issue temporary building passes to its employes this week . . . Federal employes living in the town of Martin's Addition, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4, of Chevy Chase, are now permitted to dabble in local politics . . . Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano again has recommended to Congress that 25 District credit unions be transferred from his office to Farm Credit.

Eugene Casey, who has been appointed special executive assistant to President, is a very unusual person. For a time last year he was special assistant to Gov. Black at Farm Credit. He accepted his pay checks, indorsed them and sent them back to the Treasury Department with instructions that the money be used for national defense. Now Casey is struggling with his income tax and he has discovered that he'll have to pay a tax on the Government salary that he didn't use.

There Wasn't a Goatee or Julep in Sight At Party for Kentucky Colonels in Capital

D. C. Suffrage Group Forms Congress Unit

A committee on Congressional action, to press for fulfillment of the Democratic Party's platform plank for District suffrage, was authorized by the District of Columbia Suffrage Association last night.

The association's president, Wilbur S. Finch, who was empowered to name the committee, said he already had in mind a line-up of members "who have contracts within the majority party."

The association, meeting at Thomson School, also approved a move to prepare a catechism on District suffrage to be circulated for the stimulation of the movement. Finch said that Kenneth P. Armstrong and George A. Warren, two association members, had drafted the catechism, and that it would be in final form by the time of the next board meeting in March.

A drive to seek life members of the association, at $10 or more each, was authorized by the association. Finch pointed out that funds from such a source would provide a start in the printing and distribution of the catechism.

James E. Maxwell and George W. Hodgkins were elected to fill vacancies on the association's board of directors.

Capper Is Pleased

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday said he was "greatly encouraged" by the announcement of Chairman Van Nuys, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, that he had placed the Capper-Sumners resolution on the committee agenda.

"We're gradually breaking down the opposition to District suffrage," Capper said. "This is very encouraging as it will mark the first time the Senate has held hearings on the subject in some years."

Senator Van Nuys, who explained that he favored the legislation, said he would appoint an impartial subcommittee later this week to hold hearings.

The Indiana Senator explained that his reasons for favoring a vote for District residents is that Congress is so occupied with national affairs that it has little time to devote to the municipal problems of the National Capital.

"The city is growing at a rapid rate," he added, "and its citizens deserve some form of representation in both houses of Congress."

Meanwhile, the House Judiciary Committee, which reported the Sumners resolution favorably last summer only to have it blocked by the Rules Committee, has given no indication of an effort to revive the legislation this session.

The resolution calls for a constitutional amendment which would empower Congress to extend either national representation or self-government to the District or both with the condition that such authority could be withdrawn at any time Congress saw fit.

200 State Officers Attend Willard Fete And Explode Myth

More than 200 Kentucky colonels last night exploded the myth that Kentucky is the State where the corn is full of kernels and the colonels full of corn.

To the swing version of "My Old Kentucky Home" they sedately circled the ballroom of the Willard Hotel at a dance in honor of the State's appointed officers who are residents of the Washington area.

There was not a mint julep or goatee in sight. One Kentucky tradition was upheld. There were pretty young women at the door who decorated all colonels with the ribbon of the honorable order.

Lieut. Gov. Rhodes K. Myers and Mrs. Myers were there as representatives of Gov. Keen Johnson, commander in chief of Kentucky colonels everywhere. So were Senator A. B. (Happy) Chandler and Mrs. Chandler.

Myers explained that the State is now dubbing colonels at the conservative rate of "10 or 15" a year at the Colonel's Dinner on Derby Day eve. In the era when Senator Chandler was governor, colonels were appointed at a rate as high as 100 a day. The number of Kentucky colonels is now more than 16,000.

The colonel's business session before the dance broke up quickly after several colonels got to their feet for a little impromptu talking.

Five-year-old Jewel Anne Arbogast, the youngest Kentucky colonel on record, modestly declined to speak at the session, answering all questions with a fearless bobbing and shaking of her head.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arbogast, of 225 East Mason Avenue, Alexandria, Va., she was made a colonel at the age of 2 months on Gov. Ruby Lafoon's last day in office when he is reputed to have named several hundred colonels. Her father is a member of the Associated Press staff here.

Among the noted colonels who were unable to attend last night were Rudy Vallee, Gene Tunney, Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, James A. Farley, Bing Crosby, Lou Little and many others.

Commissioners Refuse to Close Van Ness St. Area

The District Commissioners yesterday refused to close a section of Van Ness Street, as proposed by the Bureau of Standards.

Dr. Lyman Briggs, director of the bureau, termed closing of the street a "vital necessity." He said closing of the street between Connecticut Avenue and Reno Road Northwest was needed to protect national defense projects under way at the institution.

The city heads sided with citizens and property owners in the vicinity who appeared before them Monday in protest to the proposed street closing.

Crosstown Bus Service Is Opposed

Opposition to proposed crosstown bus service was voiced yesterday by the Capital Transit Co. which offered, however, an extension of the Bureau of Standards line to cross Rock Creek Park and connect with the Catholic University bus route.

Dean J. Locke, staff engineer for the company, testifying before the Public Utilities Commission, said the company is opposed to both the proposed routes for a crosstown line because they "would prove to be a financial burden to the company."

Hearings on the proposal to link Northwest and Northeast Washington by a bus system will be resumed at 2 p. m. today.

Anticipating that the commission may yet order a crosstown system despite its objection, the company spokesman said the proposed Park Road-Klingle Road crossing is "better" from the company's viewpoint than the proposed Military Road crossing of the park.

Citizens Express Preference

Citizens' associations in the last week have appeared in favor of one or both of the crossings. The District Citizens Association steering committee, headed by Nathan M. Lubar, is leading the fight for the Military Road route and the Federation of Business Men's Association, with Louis L. Obergh as spokesman, favors the lower crossing.

Locke said the Military Road route would entail a new system, whereas the lower route could absorb the present Bureau of Standards and Catholic University routes.

The engineer proposed that the commission wait until a new high-level of Rock Creek is constructed before establishing a crosstown bus system. He suggested that the company be permitted to extend the Bureau of Standards line from Van Ness Street and Connecticut Avenue through the park via Porter Street, over Klingle Road Bridge to connect with the Catholic University bus at Walbridge Place. Passengers would transfer at this point.

In speaking of his preference for the Park Road route, Locke said the net cost to the company annually for establishing this system would be $58,115 whereas the new Military Road line would entail an outlay of $105,732.

Need Many Passengers

In order to retrieve the investment for the Military Road route the company would have to haul 1,510,457 new passengers a year. The lower route would require 830,214 new fares a year to break even. Locke said he believed neither route would bring a profit to the company.

Frederick H. Kohler, chairman of the crosstown bus committee of the Cleveland Park Business Men's Association, deplored the fact that certain previous witnesses have accused the business interest of fostering the Park Road route because of selfish interests. He spoke in favor of this route as did George Falkenstein, representing the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association; M. C. Schwartz, Park View Business Men's Association; Lyman F. Kebler, Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights, and Walter L. Swanton, of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

Henry C. Hensley, of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association, appeared to favor the Military Road route, stating it would serve students of the northern section of the city who attend the University of Maryland, Catholic University or American University.

Proposed terminal for the system would be Westmoreland Circle on the west and Bladensburg Road and South Dakota Avenue on the east.

Citizens Ask Bolstering Of Bridge

Columbia Heights Forum Urges Fund For Strengthening Of Klingle St. Span

A special Congressional appropriation to strengthen the Klingle Street Bridge for the proposed Park Road-Klingle Street crosstown bus line was urged last night by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights.

(At the Public Utilities Commission hearing last week it was testified that the bridge was not strong enough to bear loaded buses.—Editor's note.)

The organization, meeting at Powell Junior High School, Hiatt Place and Lamont Street Northwest, also heard a talk by Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. He opposed organization of a municipal assembly of all civic organizations.

C. P. Hill and Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Marion Bogikes, A. Gold and John W. Williams were admitted to membership.

Petworth

The Petworth Citizens Association last night urged the appointment of a "native son" to the vacancy on the District Court bench.

Meeting at the Petworth School, the citizens heard E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., explain the company's various proposals for bus service changes which are now before the Public Utilities Commission.

The association adopted resolutions opposing any increase in fare affecting the Petworth area, urging that the last express stop on downtown Chillum and Petworth buses not be brought further uptown than Quincy Street and opposing cancellation of the bus route from Gallatin Street and Kansas Avenue Northwest to Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road.

The transit company has asked the imposition of a 10-cent straight fare on the Takoma Park bus. Another proposal calls for moving the last Sixteenth Street express stop from Park Road to Grant Circle.

The unit recommended the appointment of Capt. Floyd Truscott, of Tenth Precinct, to a police inspectorship when a vacancy occurs.

Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park

Immediate appointment of a District lawyer as a judge in the District Court to fill the vacancy left by Justice Peyton Gordon was urged by the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

The citizens also opposed further rezoning in their Northwest Washington area to permit erection of apartment houses and heard a discussion of work done by Goodwill Industries. Four new members were admitted to the association.

Columbia Hts. Business Men

Fourteen years of growth from a nucleus of 25 merchants to an association representing 170 District business organizations were celebrated last night at the dinner-dance of the Columbia Heights Businessmen's Association in the Hotel 2400. It was a speechless evening devoted to entertainment.

Four past presidents of the association attended: William F. Dismer, Barney Levitan, Lou Gottlieb and George A. Ford. And three charter members of the Columbia Heights body, Dismer, Alton B. Carty and Levitan, were introduced.

Highlights of the entertainment were the awarding of 20 door prizes from local business concerns and specialty acts by Virginia Barry, Vera Miller, Toma Genero, Georgia Grisso, and Ida Clark. Edna May was mistress of ceremonies.

No. Seventh St. Businessmen

New officers of the Northern Seventh Street Businessmen's Association were installed last night at the fourth annual banquet in the Casino Royal.

Inducted were the following: President, John M. DeMarco; first vice president, Percy Solomon; second vice president, Leon Goldman; secretary, Louis Rudden; treasurer, A. F. Harlan; general counsel, Raymond Gittelman, and sergeant-at-arms, John R. Perrine.

Georgia Ave. Businessmen

The Georgia Avenue Businessmen's Association last night approved the Commissioners appointment of a committee to investigate tax-exempt property conditions. A resolution urged the committee to "follow through" to the end that every piece of property not legally exempt would be taxed.

Pepco Plans New Substations

The Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday proposed to construct two substations, both in the Southwest section, at a total cost of $100,000.

Locations of the substations are 920 D Street and on the east side of Union Street near M Street. Before asking the Board of Zoning Adjustment for a permit to erect the substations the company first requested the Public Utilities Commission to certify the need for the substations. This, the commission indicated yesterday, will be granted.

Philadelphia Orchestra Program Pleases All

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall on Tuesday night. Soloists: Enid Szantho, contralto; Edna Phillips, harpist. Program: Air from D major Suite (Bach), Symphony No. 5 in E flat major (Sibelius), "Seit er von dir gescheiden" from "Die Goetterdaemerung" (Wagner), "Traeume" (Wagner), "O don fetale" from "Don Carlos". (Verdi), Suite, "From Childhood," for harp and orchestra (McDonald), "La Valse" (Ravel).

Conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra last evening in its fourth Washington concert of the season, Eugene Ormandy presented a program warranted to satisfy practically everybody.

BROWN

For those who like the severe classics there was Bach's "Air for the G string" arranged by Lucien Caillet; for admirers of Sibelius there was the fifth symphony; for those who demand soloists there were two, Enid Szantho and Edna Phillips; for those who are unhappy without a novelty there was Harl McDonald's suite, "From Childhood;" and for devotees of impressionism there was Ravel's "La Valse." Add to this two Wagnerian numbers and an aria by Verdi in his most dramatic mood, and it is hard to see whose preferences could have been slighted. After all a concert has its limits, and Bethoven, Brahms and Strauss must be left out some times.

Three things were particularly memorable in the performance: Mr. Ormandy's intelligent and eloquent reading of the Sibelius symphony, Enid Szantho's impressive projection of Waltraute's narrative from "Die Goetterdaemmerung," and the delightfully nostalgic emotions stirred by McDonald's suite. The symphony had a clarity that resulted from the utmost precision in phrasing, in ahe gradation of dynamics and in tonal coloring. Sibelius, the remote and reserved seer, was brought close to his listeners, and his idiomatic speech lost no shade of its meaning.

Only an artist with instinctive poetic insight could have sung as Enid Szantho did the fear-haunted words of Waltraute describing Wotan's dilemma. The very tones of terror and awe were in her voice, and the quietude of desperation marked her hushed accents. Her perfect enunciation stressed every consonant and made each line vivid. The intensity of those moments were not recaptured in her singing of "Traeume" or in the impassioned delivery of "O don fatale." Her contralto voice is not without faults of production, but its expressiveness is beyond question. She has the power to hold her auditors intent upon emotional nuances.

Harl McDonald's suite for solo harp and orchestra, instrumented with many fine touches of technique that seem to expand the harp's resonance rather than stifle it with contrasting timbres, is a charming evocation of the nursery. Seven familiar tunes, such as "I Saw Three Ships" and "Three Blind Mice," form the thematic basis for variations both sentimental and humorous. Edna Phillips, the orchestra's first harpist, played her part with artistic virtuosity and maternal sympathy.

Woman Finds Robber in Home, Is Robbed of $25, Locked Up

A woman was locked in a bedroom by a robber, a holdup man overlooked $100 in plain view in a drug store and two robbers were captured by policemen during their lunch hour in three Washington crimes yesterday.

The woman was Juliette Hogentogler, 1927 Thirty-seventh Street Northwest, who surprised the robber when she came home about 3 p. m. The robber, about 18, covered his face with an arm, pushed her into a bedroom and locked the door after taking $25 from a pocketbook.

The short-sighted holdup man, neatly dressed and with a companion, forced John Street, 2802 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, a clerk, to lie on the floor in a rear room of the Corwin Pharmacy, Barr Building, 506 Seventeenth Street Northwest. He then took $20.50 from the cash register, failing to see $100 in bills Street had been counting in the back room.

Walter Vaughn, 2033 North Twentieth Road, Arlington, Va., delivery boy, met the holdup man as he left the store, said he was not more than 20 years old and resembled the leader of a masked band of robbers that held up a District Grocery Store at 4840 Western Avenue Monday night.

The pair of robbers who were captured made the mistake of trying to hold up the Birnsteine Liquor Store, 100 Florida Avenue, while Privates W. G. Morris and E. M. Singer were eating in a restaurant next door. Birnsteine saw the men, colored, and 25 and 28 years old, threatening his wife, Mrs. Fannie Birnsteine, 43, of 1625 West Virginia Avenue Northwest, with a gun. He ran next door and summoned the policemen.

Four youthful bandits, one of them masked, obtained from $150 to $200 last night from Aaron Ezersky, 35, at his liquor store at 3301 Macomb Street Northwest. The bandits, believed by police to be members of the same group responsible for the holdup of the grocery Monday night, escaped in a sedan driven by a fifth youth.

U.S. Hygienists Adopt Defense Health Plan

A four-point program to safeguard the health of workers in defense industries was adopted yesterday at a closing session of the National Defense Conference of Governmental Industrial Hygienists.

The program, providing the framework under which State and Federal health authorities will proceed, includes:

"Services to arsenals and navy yards, for industrial health and safety, and an expanded first aid program where buildings are being constructed.

Training of more personnel (doctors and engineers).

Field and laboratory investigations of conditions in various industrial areas.

Assistance to State industrial hygiene divisions by the National Institute of Health, in consultation, in technical service and with the work of "mobile units," consisting of physicians and engineers "in the field."

Officers Elected

The program will be furthered by the Division of Industrial Hygiene, National Institute of Health, which already has an additional emergency fund of $100,000 as a deficiency appropriation this year, it was pointed out.

The conference, closing its two-day sessions in the U. S. Public Health Service Auditorium, elected as chairman Dr. Carl Nau, of Austin, Tex., director of industrial hygiene division, Texas State Department of Health. Other officers chosen were M. F. Trice, Raleigh, N. C., assistant director, industrial hygiene bureau, North Carolina State Department of Health, vice chairman, and J. J. Bloomfield, chief of the States relations section, Public Health Service's Division of Industrial Hygiene, was reelected secretary-treasurer.

The following were named to the executive committee: C. L. Pool, Rhode Island, retiring chairman of the conference; Dr. John P. Russell, California; Dr. Paul Brehm, Wisconsin, and H. H. Schrenck, Pennsylvania.

Canadian Speaks

A full program, which would cost $1,650,000 a year, to expand health and protective measures for defense workers, was laid before the conference at yesterday's session by Dr. C. D. Selby, chairman, subcommittee on industrial health and medicine of the Health and Medical Committee, Federal Security Agency. This program, which has been approved by the committee, depends on availability of appropriations, but the adopted program is a step in the same direction.

Dr. Kingsley Kay, of Canada, engineer with the division of industrial hygiene, Canadian Department of Pensions and National Health, spoke at a closing session yesterday on "Industrial Hygiene Activities in Canadian Defense Industries." He said the number of industrial workers in Canada is approaching 3,000,000, and that many new industrial hygiene problems have arisen because of accelerated activity, especially in patrol ship manufacture and the aircraft industry.

To try out the effect of new chemicals which are being widely used in defense industries, volunteer physicians and chemists at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda are being exposed to low concentrations, after the chemicals have been tested on animals, Dr. Paul A. Neal said in an address at the conference yesterday. He is surgeon of the division of industrial hygiene at the Institute.

Dog Tax Files For 3 Years Reported Lost

Further complications in the inquiry into shortages in dog tax revenues developed yesterday when Commissioner David McCoach, jr., announced records of the tags for 1934, 1935 and 1936 are "lost" and "unaccounted for."

He did not, however, indicate that these records might reveal further shortages.

A complete report of the shortages which are reported by the Commissioners to have occurred from July 1, 1936, to November 30, 1940, totaling $9,800.75, was revealed yesterday.

The report, compiled by Acting Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton, stated that the Commissioners January 12, 1938, authorized the disposition of dog tag stubs, 1920 to 1933, as waste paper.

"I cannot find any authority to dispose of any dog tag records subsequent to 1933," Pilkerton said in his report.

The Commissioner indicated an inquiry would be developed along these lines in the near future.

He also stated that a letter is being drafted by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to recover the money through bonding companies.

Two women employes of the District were dismissed "for the good of the service" following Monday's meeting of the Commissioners when the shortages in dog license revenues were discussed.

Pilkerton's report showed that from July 1, 1936, to June 30, 1937, there was a shortage of $2,497.87; for the 1938 fiscal year there were no records available; for 1939 fiscal year, $3,070.91; for fiscal year 1940, $2,893.94, and for the first five months of the present fiscal year, $1,338.

Americans Eat 5.3 Pounds of Cheese Apiece in Year

Americans, having made better mousetraps than their neighbors, now are making more cheese with which to bait them, according to statistics released yesterday by the Census Bureau.

The bureau announced that the current generation consumes 2 pounds more cheese per capita than that of 30 years ago.

In 1939, it found, the Nation turned out 695,812,098 pounds of cheese, enough for 5.3 pounds for each man, woman and child in the country, as compared with 3.3 pounds for each in 1909.

The total included 9,000,000 pounds of limburger.

Largest item was 500,000,000 pounds of American cheese. American-made Swiss cheese came to 43,000,000 pounds and Italian varieties totaled 18,000,000.

American cheese appetites do not compare with those of the Swiss, however. Each resident of Switzerland eats 18 pounds of cheese a year.

Six-Pound Son Born to Wife, 12; Father Is Only 17

Union, Miss., Feb. 18 (AP).—A normal, 6-pound boy was born late yesterday to 12-year-old Mrs. Wilmer Munn, of Union.

Her 17-year-old husband was so happy over becoming a father that he refused to leave the hospital, except to go to his meals.

The couple, members of well known families in this section, quit high school last year after a childhood courtship and were married in April.

The mother is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Rush. She weighs only 85 pounds and is 4-feet-11-inches tall.

Job Insurance Heads Propose Deep Tax Cut

Liberalization of the District Unemployment Compensation Act with provisions to reduce the employers' pay roll taxes and increase the scale of payments to the jobless were recommended yesterday by the District Unemployment Compensation Board.

In effect the proposed plan would reduce the present 2.7 per cent employer tax to one-half of 1 per cent, at least for the time being, and would invoke a sliding scale tax plan as a permanent policy in determining the tax rate.

Under the plan, whenever the amount of surplus was four times the highest amount of jobless benefits paid out for any one of the preceding ten years, the tax to employers would be set at one-half of 1 per cent.

Surplus Now at Peak

At present the surplus in the D. U. C. fund is more than $19,000,000 and the largest year of benefit payments so far has yet to exceed $4,000,000. This being the case the pay roll tax would be set at one-half of one per cent should Congress pass the proposed amendments. A similar plan was considered last year by the McGehee subcommittee of the House District Committee but was sidetracked by Congress. The then 3 per cent tax, however, was reduced to the present 2.7 per cent tax.

Despite the decrease in the tax and enactment of increased payments to the jobless the surplus fund has continued to accumulate.

Although the basic tax rate would be one-half of one per cent, this tax would increase as the surplus, or trust fund account dwindled; so that, if the surplus was three times the highest benefit year payment, the tax rate would be automatically 1.2 per cent; if the surplus was two times the highest benefit payment total, the tax would be 2 per cent; and if the surplus was less than twice the highest benefit payment, the rate would be 2.7 per cent.

All of the changes in the tax rate would be applicable to all employers. This is unlike the "experience rating" formula which was proposed last year in that different taxes would be assessed against the many employers depending upon their own experience as to the unemployed they place on the jobless rolls.

Also proposed under the amendments are increased payments to the insured. "The present maximum payment of $18 a week for a maximum duration of 19 weeks would be raised to $20 a week for 20 weeks.

Credits for men called to military duty would be "frozen" so that the men would not lose any of the jobless payments made to the board during their past working experience, under the proposed changes to the act.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur ("Bugs") Baer.

If Mrs. Roosevelt claims the rhumba isn't enough exercise I say she couldn't have been doing the eight-day, self-winding, paid-up and non-assessible Cuban rhumba with the all-Havana filler.

I want to inform Eleanor that the authentic, sod-busting, spasmodic and continuous rhumba is more exercise than tearing down a jail from the inside.

Down in Havana I whirled for five hours like an egg-beater in an omelet factory.

It's a combination of centrifugal force, capillary attraction and a cat-fit set to music.

I lost 11 pounds and my steamboat ticket. A little senorita kicked me around a 60-acre dance floor with no neutral corners, twirled me like three plums on a slot machine and kept me stepping out like a sore-footed penguin in a river of running lava.

Finally, I saw the daybreak shining through yellow blinds and I dove head first through the window to escape. But what I thought was the sunrise was an electric light in a bass drum.

The genuine Cuban rhumba is more exercise than chinning yourself on a moonbeam. I went flying through the air like orders in the army. Fighting a grizzly hand to hand is just like sitting out a rhumba.

It's a street riot indoors. And if Mrs. Roosevelt ever gets to Havana, which she certainly will if she hasn't, I will give her the address of a rhumba palace that is as lowdown as busted arches and hotter than a boy scout's flashlight.

I want to go on record as saying the rhumba is exercise, if I can do so without stirring up the youth congress.

JEWELS OF THE MAHARAJAHS. Those jewels so lavishly festooned over beauteous Gypsy Markoff, at the Troika, are the real thing, direct from the treasure chests of Indian maharajas. While in India, Gypsy made a series of appearances in the palaces of the native princes with Shan Kardemec, India's greatest dancer. The tour lasted for about ten months because the company was invited to remain for a two or three weeks' house party at every palace. Each rajah bestowed a few rings or bracelets on Gypsy as farewell gifts, the total being a jewel collection appraised at $50,000. The palace vaudeville circuit in India must be wonderful.

DANCING ON WHEELS heads Lotus' carte d' diversion. Billy Shaw performs ballet on a unicycle when partner Idylle isn't tossing him around like a shuttlecock. Victor and Ruth dance on roller skates, and very gracefully, when they're not daredevilling. It seems novel when Dixie Roberts, Georgia peach, tap steps "Dixie Glide" on her tootsies . . . Arresting backstage personality at Lotus this week, is 9-year-old Roxanna Shaw, daughter of Billy and Idylle. Roxanna travels everywhere with her parents, loves show business, keeps up with her schooling via a correspondence course, is undecided whether she'll be an airplane hostess, artist or actress when she grows up.

ATHLETIC CANARY. Marion Stanfield, the alluring singer with Tommy Marvini's Band in the Metronome Room, played baseball (first base), basketball (forward) and field hockey (center) at high school in Detroit. While she's planning to do her quota of Washington sightseeing, she's also determined to take in some of the ice hockey battling at Riverside.

TOPS IN TRICKS. "Tavern in the Town" as rolled out by the inimitable Music Hall Boys at the Shoreham. It's stupendous. We'd pay money, too, to see Barnee taking those private samba lessons from Pauline Barry (Castaine and Barry) . . . The midnight "jam sessions" at Paul Young's with Al Spieldock's boys doing the darnedest unscheduled hot licks, Jerry Brandow stepping a la boogie-woogie. Proprietor Paul elatedly trucked on down himself the other eve, a sure sign that P. Young's is booming . . . The shining rendition of "Frenesi" that is a peculiar and individual accomplishment of Carmen Cavallaro's Band in the Cosmos Room . . . SIGNIFICANT SHORT STORIES. Some members of the Swedish colony in Washington are telling Eve Knight, of the King Cole Room, that she's an international figure. It seems they sent a magazine containing her picture to Sweden in the diplomatic pouch . . . Flash! Casino Royal's "Jivin' Jack" Schafer is perfecting a new song. The title is "It's Too Late, Brother, It's Too Late" . . . When the Anchor Room's Mat Windsor recently played for the dinner of the Washington College of Law, he found that the favorite tunes of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas were "East Side, West Side and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

"THESE THINGS YOU LEFT" will be the biggest hit in six months, says Maestro Paul Kain, of Mayfair, who is certainly in a position to judge being the leader of the WJSV Studio Band, he is conversant with every new member. But this column can't get "You're a Double Lovely" out of its head.

ABOUT THE RHYTHM BOYS. That rosy fellow, aJck Gardner, of Milt Herth's Trio in the Neptune Room, is internationally recognized as a master pianist. In "Le Jazz Hot," by Hugues Panassie, recognized as one of the most authoritative books ever written on syncopation, Jack receives third best mention among American pianists . . . When Don Carper's Four leave Cafe Caprice on May 28, they'll go direct to open the new Tropic Room at the Stuyvesant Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y . . . Ramon, leader of Madrillon's Trio Lirico, is also one of the town's most colorful conga line leaders . . . For rhythm on the violin, listen to Durward Bowersox, of the Rainbow Room. He's acknowledged to be one of the country's best dance music violinists.

Tomorrow's "Hobby Horse Night" at Kavakos' Grill. Chief event is the race arranged between visiting marines, soldiers, sailors and National Guardsmen. Rivalry between the service branches is something terrific. But those hobby horses have tricks that Sea Biscuit never learned.

VOLUNTEER SINGERS. Every patron at Restaurant "823" also seems to be a singer. When Lee Everett gets out there and waves his arms, they all warble like a bunch of nightingales—well, semi-nightingales. But it sounds amazingly well . . . There's never a night at Ciro's Famous Village when volunteer talent doesn't step forward. The other night it was dancing teacher Georgia Snow who can also sing a topping rhythm song, and Gary Angelico, an amateur with a real voice . . . Piquant Helen Malcolm, novachordist of the Silver Fox, has the gift of inciting community singing. The Silver Fox patrons make the week-ends ring.

NEW HI-HATTER. Bill Marsden, smart young singing guitarist, has just joined Harry Somerville's Four M's at Hi Ha. Bill has been all around this globe, played in such varied places as Paris' Hotel Elysee and New York's Leon and Eddie's. High rhythm is his speciality.

AMBITION STORY. Bob Korn, who may serve you at Olmstead's, attends a Government engineering school from midnight to 8 a. m. His evening work at Olmstead's keeps the pot boiling. That's getting ahead the hard way, but we've an idea that Bob's going to make good—in a big way.

Do you like to hear the newest dance tunes in arrangements so interwoven with rhythm trickery that they seem even newer than new? Then turn your steering wheel down toward Nightingale and Redd Raffell's Band.

Deficiency Appropriation Urged for Colored Schools

Declaring that "a critical situation exists in colored public schools because of teacher shortage and building congestion, the Washington Council, National Negro Congress, yesterday called upon citizens to urge Commissioners and other officials to procure an "immediate deficiency appropriation."

The release of a 13-page bulletin on the problem by the council was timed just before the Board of Education meeting this afternoon, when the board will consider making a request for a deficiency appropriation for colored schools.

The council, in the bulletin, said that 118 teachers are needed to relieve overcrowded classes in colord schools, that the Board of Education requested 99 and that only 6 appeared finally in the Commissioners' budget estimates for 1942.

Plans and construction of 15 buildings, representing an outlay of $1,430,127, were requested by the board, with construction of two buildings to cost $535,000 recommended by the Commissioners and the President, the bulletin stated. There was no recommendation for sites for new buildings, although the board requested ten, it was added.

The council said that "failure of the 1942 budget recommendations to provide teachers to relieve overcrowding in colored schools reflects deliberate racial discrimination."

Stating that colored schools have not been receiving their proportionate share of outlay for buildings, grounds and equipment, the bulletin charged "a broken promise" along that line by the Budget Bureau.

The bulletin was issued by the council's civic affairs committee, of which Doxey A. Wilkerson is chairman.

Eagles Beat Sea Gulls; Regain League Lead

Whirlaway Poor Third in Hialeah Upset

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on his vacation his column is being written by other members of The Post sports staff.)

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Ocala, Fla., Feb. 18.—The bit of italic type preceding this column telling you that Shirley Povich is on vacation and other members of the staff will attempt to fill in-brings the writer back to the grind for an hour or two here in the heart of Florida.

WHITTLESEY

We, too, are fortunate enough to be enjoying the annual office leave interrupted just long enough for a crack at "This Morning." Whether your heart be in baseball, golf or any other sport you find yourself humming "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" down here as 29 major and minor league clubs prepare for spring training.

It is a little too early for most clubs but everywhere signs of the national pastime are in evidence. We left Miami yesterday as Bill Terry was interrupting the golf game of several members of the New York Giants for a snappy two-hour workout on Miami Field. Members of the Brooklyn Dodgers were passing through town on the way to the Pan American Airport and a clipper ship to Havana, their new spring home.

Driving to the State's highly publicized attractions, you can't forget baseball. At the foot of the hill leading to the singing tower of Bok in Lake Wales, painters were refreshing the letters "Kansas City Blues" on a high fence passing through Orlando, spring home of your seventh place Nats. The hotel was expecting Clark Griffith from his pet golf course in Bell Air, Danny MacFayden the bespectacled former National League moundsman who will work for Bucky Harris this year, was playing in a mixed Scotch foursome at Orlando Country Club. Joe Stripp was bringing his baseball school to a close and the sports pages were heralding the arrival of the Nats this week to Tinker Field.

Paul Derringer who throws a fast one past those National Leaguers for the champion Cincinati Reds was in the finals of the Tampa City Golf Tournament, though he was an early victim in the recent baseball players tournament at St. Petersburg.

Here in Ocala just a few miles from the famed Silver Springs our host tipped us off that the Milwaukee Brewers who make their winter quarters here will be the winners of the American Association flag. Thus the baseball fever gets you here in the citrus State. So why should the future expert predictions of Mr. Povich concerning the pennant races be the only wrong ones published in this space. This is the way we think they'll finish this year from tee to green.

1. The Cleveland Indians making their first World Series appearance in three decades. Regardless how often you boo them next year Feller & Co. have got it and will be tough to beat. On paper the best team last year. Strengthened by trades they should romp. 2. St. Louis and I mean the Browns. A crazy patch quilt club that could win if they all clicked. Watch and see. 3. The New York Yankees, not the same old Yanks but just a good third-place club. 4. The Boston Red Sox. Oranges grow on trees down here but not pitchers and in baseball the best offense is not the best defense. 5. The Detroit Tigers. Whether Hank Greenberg wields hickory or steel it looks like a carbon copy of the 1933 Nats. From first place to the second division without much trouble. 6. The Chicago White Sox. Dark horse of the entire outfit. Jack Doyle lowered their pennant odds in a hurry last August and he may have to again. 7. The Washington Nationals. You have to show me. 8. Connie Mack is a great old gent, but unless he can win some 60 games in a surprise comeback it looks like an encore for the cellar. With apologies to Shirley Povich.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo at Home

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

It was generous of you to give me that fifty dollar raise. My new private office, with crane to raise and lower my head, is ideal.

WALTER HAIGHT

I appreciate your sendnig to New York for that cigarette ad girl to be my secretary. Thanks, too, for that new roadster with the built-in bar. Now, remember, Boss, I don't want to appear ungrateful and I'm not going on a strike, but can't I have somebody except that Oxford graduate for a copy boy. He gives me an inferiority complex, wheeling that tea tray into my office every afternoon. Take the other day, for instance. I'm sitting there trying to figure when Hinda Wassau was coming to the Gayety and he asks me when the Mellon Art Gallery is going to open.

If it's just the same with you, Boss, I'd like to trade him for a veteran Western Union messenger and a spittoon. Or if you can't arrange that deal, send somebody over to Foggy Bottom and tell him to yell, "Boy." If a freckled-faced kid steps up and asks, "How big do men grow in your part of town?" throw a sack over his head and give him the job. And if the kid has a half brick in his hand and says, "Get going," you might make him a reporter. He may be another Eddie Folliard.

Well, Boss, honors continue to be heaped upon me. Alan Clarke, the Maryland owner and breeder of race horses, dropped by to tell me that he has named a horse after me. Just think of it, Boss, before Bowie closes you can go out and play two bucks on a horse named Walter Haight. Clarke wouldn't tell me the breeding of the 2-year-old. I guessed "Fatback out of Gutter" and "Modesty out of Shrinking Violet." He just smiled and said I would find out.

Clarke says he is a tubby little fellow with a white blaze on his face that somewhat resembles a letter "L." He says he has a big appetite and eats all the bedding straw out of his stall. I didn't want to make Clarke mad, but I came near saying, "Yes, I know, he don't like to work out and he's been asking you to send him to Hialeah."

Well, I hope Walter Haight can run faster that Walter Haight, if you know what I mean.

If memory serves right, there hasn't been a horse named after a celebrity that was worth two bits. Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor and Jack Benny were bums. I just hate to think about Walter Haight running some day in a bull ring, and no wise cracks about the "bull" part.

Just think, Boss, some day you might be forced to use a headline "Walter Haight Wins $50,000 Kentucky Derby," and then it's going to be mighty tough for me to try to laugh the finance company out of a payment.

The more I think about the possibilities of having a horse runnng named Walter Haight, the more I think I shouldn't have given Clarke permission. I have reference to those footnotes under the charts. Wouldn't it be nice to pick up the paper some morning, look at the fifth at Marlboro and see the notation, "Walter Haight wasn't good enough." And in my position of Washington's No. 1 wit (note to printers: Don't you dare put nit in front of that word), suppose somebody looked in the chart and saw, "Walter Haight pulled up sore."

I dread the day when the Ninth Street boys get their best chips down and make Walter Haight the favorite at say 3 to 5 and Walter Haight has a 5-length lead coming down hte stretch and standing by the fence at the six-

C. U. Downed By Loyola

Loyola of Baltimore swamped the Catholic University hoopmen, 51 to 30, on the Brookland court last night in a game as dull as last week's weather report. This was the thirteenth win of the current campaign for the visitors, who boast an early-season victory over the Georgetown five.

Paced by Barney Goldberg, Bernie Thobe and Franny Bock, who accounted for three baskets each in the opening half, the Greyhounds took an early lead in a manner that left little doubt of the outcome. Every man in the starting line-up scored, and the Baltimoreans left the floor at the midway mark on the long end of a 24-17 count.

Ed Barczak, senior member of the Loyola squad, took over the bulk of the offensive work in the final period and his half dozen baskets were good enough to give him runner-up scoring honors for the game.

The hapless Cards, who haven't won a game all season, received some scant consolation in the fact that their Jim Mulvihill led all scorers with 13 points.

To make the atmosphere even more dreary in the Brooklands' area the Catholic frosh dropped a preliminary clash to the Baby Hoyas of Georgetown University, 49 to 30. Dan Gabbianelli of Georgetown and Dick Scanlon of Catholic shared scoring laurels in this game with 13 each.

Math Professor Gets Arithmetic Lesson in Ring

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Feb. 18.—The fistic hopes of Dr. Douglas McClay, 25-year-old mathematics teacher, went a-glimmering in the third round of a Southeastern A. A. U. Golden Gloves bout tonight when he lost by a technical knockout to Lorenzo Allgood, of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga.

The Harvard graduate, who now conducts classes at Georgia Tech, was floored in the first round, took a good lacing in the second and after being downed again in the third, was ruled the loser.

Shady Brook Entry Downs Derby Hope

Agricole, McCreary Up and Cadmium, Stablemates, Are First and Second

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 18.—The Kentucky Derby stock of Whirlaway took a distinct drop when Warren Wright's colt went down to the most ignominious defeat of his brilliant career here this afternoon. Closing at 30 cents on the dollar, the top 2-year-old of 1940 finished a soundly beaten third in the five-horse field that met in the 7-furlong Arcadia Purse.

Agricole and Cadmium, both representing Theodore Mueller's Shady Brook Farm, were the two that led home the supposedly unbeatable colt. Agricole lost ground but still managed to beat his stablemate by a length and a half. Cadmium held three lengths' advantage over Whirlaway. Maemante and Bolivar were distant trailers. The winning entry paid $9.70 for $2. The time was 1:23 1-5.

Basil James, one of America's most accomplished riders, came on from Santa Anita to fill the engagements here on Whirlaway. The latter, which had won his winter debut with one of his typical stretch rushes, did not come on in his accustomed manner today. He had no apparent excuse in the running, even breaking faster than usual. He did not show his occasional tendency to run out at the last turn. Rather, it was the winner that raced very wide turning for home, and stayed well out to the end.

Crowd Is Stunned

Maemante was the only starter not in for the Flamingo Stakes. Whirlaway's shocking defeat stunned the big crowd and left his future prospects somewhat in the dark. Agricole, in his last start, was a decisively beaten horse in Dispose's Bahamas Handicap. Conn McCreary rode the Kentucky-owned colt today, chalking up a double in the saddle.

Bolivar, which had shown good form over the turf course here, set the pace by daylight, followed by Maemante for a quarter mile. Agricole then set after the leader and shot to the front around the bend, never to be headed thereafter despite taking the long way home. Whirlaway, which had been running fourth, in front of Cadium, made up ground in threatening fashion and was second at the top of the stretch.

Trainer Ben Jones 'Not Disappointed'

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 18 (AP).—After Warren Wright's Whirlaway had gone down to a surprising defeat in the Arcadia Purse here today, finishing well behind Agricole and Cadmium in the 7-furlong test, Trainer Ben Jones said his charge cooled out satisfactorily and that he was not too disappointed in the colt. Said Ben:

"The only way I might be able to account for it was that maybe he was too close up during the early running, or maybe he just couldn't spot those horses that much weight. Can't say anything yet about the Flamingo next Saturday. Mr. Wright will want to consider what the next steps to be taken with Whirlaway. He may want to rest up the colt for a few weeks."

Double TKO Given Official Stamp in Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 18.—The "double technical knockout" ruling in last week's fight between welterweights Sammy Secreet, of Pittsburgh, and Pat Carroll, of Detroit, received the official O. K. of the State boxing commission today.

The commission, upholding Referee Clarence Rosen's verdict acted on the testimony of Dr. N. H. Schlafer, commission physician who jumped into the ring in the seventh round to demand the bout be stopped.

"When I entered the ring," Dr. Schlafer said, "I was concerned over the condition of a bad cut over Secreet's eye. But after I got inside I noticed that Carroll was turning an ashy white, because of the loss of blood from the cuts he had suffered, and informed Referee Rosen that, in my opinion, neither boy was in condition to continue."

Nelson, Yale Coach, Names His Assistants

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Feb 18.—Emerson W. (Spike) Nelson, Yale's first non-graduate football boss, tonight named his staff of seven assistants—four of them holdovers from the last regime—and coupled it with an expression of "confidence in the future."

Nelson, former Iowa star who replaced Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond as head football coach last month when Yale cast aside its graduate coaching system, went to the Midwest for most of his appointees. They are:

Edward E. Howell, Nebraska, 1929.
John P. Saso, Illinois, 1922.
W. Robert Voights, Northwestern, 1939.
Ivan B. Williamson, Michigan, 1933.
Reginald D. Root, Yale, 1926.
David G. Colwell, Yale, 1938.
Marvin A. Franklin, Vanderbilt, 1939.

Williamson, like Nelson, aided Pond last fall when the varsity went through its most disastrous campaign, losing seven of eight games. Root, Franklin and Colwell tutored the freshmen.

Of the newcomers, Howell coached at Kansas State Teachers, and Louisiana State; Sabo at the University of Rochester, Kansas, Illinois and Vermont and Voights at Illinois Wesleyan.

The staff, reduced from 12 under a new economy program, will report on March 31 for five weeks of spring practice.

Ogden Miller, chairman of the board of athletic control, promised Nelson and his staff "every cooperation," and reiterated a prediction Yale would retain its "traditional excellence in football."

State Will Investigate Gus Dorazio's 'Dive'

Louis' Knockout Victory Called 'Frame Up' By Group of Pennsylvania's Solons

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 18.—A State Senate committee at Harrisburg today began considering demands for an investigation of "frame-up" charges in connection with the Louis-Dorazio fight, while most boxing experts figured Gus Dorazio was lucky he wasn't framed in a coffin—he was hit that hard last night.

Along Lammer's Lane—from New York's Broadway to Philadelphia's Broad Street—the concensus was that the Harrisburg fight yammering is merely a bit of political publicity that will soon fade for lack of footing.

Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis and his check for $18,730.70 were in New York today when a special five-member subcommittee of the State Senate judiciary general committee at Harrisburg was appointed to study a resolution asking for an investigation of the Brown Bombers' second-round kayo over Dorazio last night.

Committee Appointed

Dorazio had hardly shaken the cobwebs from his brain and picked up his check for $5,853.44 today when this special committee was appointed to consider the resolution co-sponsored by State Senators J. Jerome Jaspan and Anthony Disilvestro, Philadelphia Democrats. This resolution was actually introduced two weeks ago, but it was given more flesh today when another Senator, John J. Haluska, Cambria Democrat, charged on the Senate floor that last night's bout was "a complete frame-up" and that Dorazio "took a perfect dive."

Senator Haluska assured his colleagues: "I know what I'm talking about because I spent ten years in the ring myself."

Anyway, the Harrisburg subcommittee is expected to report within two weeks whether it recommends an investigation. Senator O. J. Tallman, Allentown Republican, is chairman of the subcommittee.

Hard Smash

In cauliflower canyon there was much more discussion today over the merits of Bomber Joe's performance than about Dorazio's efforts. Louis floored the Philadelphia challenger at 1:30 of the sec-

Pace K. O.'s Armstrong

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Feb. 18.—Georgie Pace, of Cleveland, knocked out Spider Armstrong, of Toronto, in the sixth round of their ten-round bout at Maple Leaf Gardens tonight. Pace lashed out quickly with a succession of smashing body punches to break up what had been a close fight. The knockout came at 2:45 of the sixth round.

Pace, former National Boxing Association bantamweight champion, hurt Armstrong consistently with his body punches. When the sixth round began he slammed one into Armstrong's ribs and the Canadian went down for an eight count. Armstrong came up and tried to slug it out, but another flurry of body punches sent him down for a seven count and a third series floored him for keeps.

Roosevelt Five Defeats Anacostians

By Bill Burnett

Closing out the regular season, Roosevelt High's defending interhigh basketball champions earned a deadlock with Eastern for first place in the standings yesterday by giving Anacostia's Indians a 51-29 scalping at the latters' court.

No sooner had the tie been realized, however, than the Rough Riders dropped back to second again. In a draw for pairings in the championship tournament Friday and Saturday, held by Birch Bayh, head of the Department of Health and Physical Education, Eastern came out with the No. 1 position.

The White Tide thus will meet the No. 3 team in the standings, Tech, in Friday night's finale at Tech gym. Roosevelt's No. 2 club tangles with fourth-place Western in the opener. Starting time will be 7:30.

Meet Conquerors

As a result of the draw Roosevelt, seeking its second title in more than two decades, must meet the only public school quintet to which it has lost in two years in the first game of the fourney. Eastern will go out for its second triumph in two weeks over the forces of Tech.

Though no more decisive than anticipated, Roosevelt's victory yesterday set at least one mark for the season. It was the first time an interhigh team has scored 50 points or more in series play.

Frankie Ciango and Hymie Perlo, the Riders' "basket twins," went right into action to lead Roosevelt to a 16-to-5 margin after one period and there was never any doubt thereafter. Elmer Leukhardt, towering center, tallied the losers' only points in the first stanza.

Indians Rally Slightly

A slight Indian rally in the second quarter brought the team's deficit to only 22-11 at intermission, and after the third session Roosevelt was out front, 36-22. Reserves were used freely by both teams.

Perlo, despite the fact he missed part of the game, hung up his high-scoring mark of the season, 19 points. Ciango's 10 counters barely beat out Charley Howard, who managed for 8 before going out in the fourth quarter on personal fouls. Leukhardt led the losers' shooting, firing away 18 times, but he got only two field goals. Adams and Penn registered eight apiece for Anacostia.

The first quarter was marked by Referee Dave Keppel's chasing of Tommy Robertson, Rider forward, for abusive language.

Washington Takes Easy Victory, Snaps Gull Streak; Orioles Topped by 1 Point

By Jack Munhall

The Atlantic City Sea Gulls were 30 minutes late in arriving for last night's match with the Washington Eagles at Riverside Stadium, but the delay merely proved a reprieve for the resort "tough guys."

Before 4,057 fans the Eagles triumphed with ease, 4-2, to once again displace the Baltimore Orioles by one point atop the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, snap the Gulls' two-match winning streak and even their season's series with the visitors at four victories apiece.

It was a thoroughly successful night for the Eagles, who are back in their excellent early-season form and especially for young Goalie Lester Colvin, who as late as the nineteenth minpte of the second period had a shutout in his grasp. Colvin lost his shutout at 19:50 of that session on a tough break but continued to play a stellar net game.

Discordant Note

Only one discordant note was sounded in the Washington victory symphony. That was the failure of Center Norm Burns to pick up even one of the two goals he needs to establish a new league goal-scoring record. Moreover, the former Sea Gull lost ground in the scoring race to Atlantic City's Heck Pozzo and Sammy Fasano, who accounted for one point each.

Though the margin of Washington's victory was only two goals there was never any doubt as to the eventual winner, for the Eagles constructed a 4-0 lead in the first periods and then were inclined to coast. The Gulls tallied their second goal midway of the final stanza and then were kept well in check by Colvin and defensemen Len Burrage, Ross Knipfel and Jim McCurry, who were breaking up enemy sorties in their incipiency. Paul Courteau, though he did not score a goal, was invaluable to the Eagles' attack. He was credited with assists in the first two Washington goals.

Rough Period

Rough and sloppy, the first period found the Eagles flashing a spark of brilliance to score one goal and capitalizing two consecutive penalties to the Gulls to add another for a 2-0 lead.

Dewey put together a clever feint and a difficult shot to chalk up the initial point at 4:49. Taking a pass from Courteau, Dewey, with his new-found aggressiveness, charged into big Stew Cheetham, Atlantic City defenseman, lost the puck temporarily but regained it and simultaneously unloosed a whistler through Goalie Porter.

Then the match lost all semblance of hockey as the Sea Gulls and Eagles forgot all about the puck and concentrated upon setting each other up for body checks into the boards. Finally, Referee Harwood cognizant of what was happening thumbed Dick into the penalty box for slashing Courteau, and Washington jumped at the opportunity to tally again, Burrage following up shots by Germann and MacBride to increase his team's margin to 2-0.

Increase Lead

Penalties sprinkled the second period, but through it all the Eagles showed good form and increased their lead to 4-1 as Goalie Colvin lost his chance for a shutout only ten seconds before the end of the session.

Dewey's second goal of the match, again on a pass from Courteau, and one by McBride, assisted by Germann, propelled Washington in front, 4-0, and it appeared that the Gulls were en route to a humiliating shutout. For Colvin couldn't have been tougher to score on had

Hoya, G. W. Fives Seriously Threatened Tonight; Terps Busy

Va. Faces Colonials At Riverside

Georgetown Travels For Penn State Game; Winless Md. Quint Engages Rutgers

Georgetown and George Washington tonight stake their sparkling basketball records against dangerous opposition while University of Maryland seeks its first victory of the season in a court-ring double-header at College Park.

The Colonials, with 15 victories and 3 defeats, go into action with the University of Virginia at Riverside Stadium at 8:30. The Hoyas, sporting a record of 14 triumphs and 2 losses, visit the lair of Penn State's Lions, and the Terps, winless in 18 games, play host to Rutgers.

Following the Maryland-Rutgers game, which is to start at 8 o'clock, will be a boxing match between Maryland Frosh and Charlotte Hall, one of the few prep schools in the vicinity with a varsity mitt team.

G. W. Favored

George Washington, looking ahead about two weeks to its return meeting March 5 with Georgetown to which it lost last month, will rule a slight favorite over Gus Tebell's Cavaliers and their "Meanwell System," in what should be an interesting contest. Both are high-scoring fives, featuring rangy, eagle-eyed marksmen. The Colonials have a prolific point-spouting trio in Matt Zunic, the District's leading scorer, Charley Jones and Joe Comer, and the Cavaliers boast an equally good threesome of Bob Harman, Billy McCann and Billy Wiltshire.

The starting Buff line-up will be Zunic and Comer at forwards, Jones at center, and Bobby Gilham and Lou Veltri at guards. Virginia's opening five will consist of Harman and Wiltshire at forwards, Albert Lowman at center, and Landon Buchanan and McCann at guards.

There will be a preliminary at 7:15.

Georgetown, in invading Penn State, will be aiming to duplicate or better the 28-24 licking it handed the Lions here last month, before moving on to Scranton the next night to complete a two-day trip. Following these two games the Hoyas will play Fordham February 28 in New York and then rest until closing their season with G. W. The Hoyas, hopeful of landing a berth in the National sportswriters' championship tournament at Madison Square Garden, must sweep their remaining games to be eligible, since many teams have lost only one game and would be considered ahead of the Hilltop.

Close Decisions

Latest scoring statistics released by Georgetown show that the Hoyas have outscored their 16 opponents to date by 674 points to 562 and have won only 6 of theri 14 victories by more than eight points. Likewise both of the Ripleymen's losses were close, to Loyola, of Baltimore, in their season's opener, 36-32, and to Syracuse, 49-43.

Maryland's courtmen will have precedent in their favor in playing Rutgers. They have played only once before and Maryland won, 51-39, last year at New Brunswick.

The boxing between Maryland frosh and Charlotte Hall will feature Maryland's Walt Mechey, for two years South Atlantic 165-pound prep school champion, and Charlotte Hall's lightheavyweight, Frank Cady, who is remembered here for his football and basketball feats at St. John's Prep.

Maple Leafs Tie Bruins in Overtime, 2-2

By the Associated Press

Boston, Feb. 18.—A pair of goals by Art Jackson offset two scored by Syl Apps tonight when the Boston Bruins stretched their now National Hockey League unbeaten record to 22 games by gaining a 2-2 overtime tie with the Toronto Maple Leafs before a 16,209 crowd at Boston Garden.

By the narrow margin of a half game the Bruins managed to retain their first-place lead over the Leafs.

It was the eighth deadlock the Bruins have chalked up since they were defeated last in Montreal on December 21. To gain it, they had to come from behind, to the delight of their largest home crowd of the season.

Rangers Defeat Crippled Americans

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—The New York Rangers defeated the crippled New York Americans, 5-2, tonight in a dull National Hockey League game before 8,653 fans.

The victory gave the Rangers a boost in their chase of the Detroit Red Wings, who hold third place, with the Rangers now four points behind them. For the Americans it was a blow to their hopes of cathing the Montreal Canadians, five points ahead of them in the sixth and last playoff spot.

But before landing the lethal larrup, the champion's performance was such that it created three divisions of comment: (1) Most of the record crowd of 15,902 customers at Convention Hall, who never before had seen Louis in action as champion, rated Joe's work as magnificent; (2) Boxing writers of Philadelphia and New York differed somewhat on whether Louis indicated that he had regained his old-time form or that he was slipping, and (3) a majority of the managers and trainers at the ringside thought the Brown Bomber far off form.

N. Y. Skating Stars to Seek Crowns Here

The largest group of New York skaters ever to represent Gotham in a national event in another district will compete for ice skating's premier honors in the National Indoor Speed Skating championships at Uline Ice Arena, Saturday and Sunday, February 22 and 23.

Headed by Virginia Jahn, holder of the Middle Atlantic Outdoor, Eastern States Outdoor, Southern New York Outdoor and Interstate Outdoor titles, 30 New Yorkers will be represented in speed skating's blue ribbon event of the year along with what is expected to be a record list of entries from all sections of the country.

In addition to Miss Jahn, Margie Cummings, Metropolitan half-mile champion, and Alice Burnham, Middle Atlantic Indoor half-mile titleholder are entered in the senior women's division.

Werner to Invade

Among the male stars will be Dick Werner, who for the past five years has won every major title in the East and who will be New York's outstanding hope to cop national honors in the men's senior class from such stars as defending Champion Leo Freisinger, of Chicago; Delbert Lamb, former North American outdoor champion and former Olympic team star, from Milwaukee; Vic Ronchetti, of Chicago; Charles (Chuck) Leighton, recent Silver Skates Carnival winner and a host of other outstanding speed merchants.

Frankie Williams, recent graduate from the juvenile class, who will compete among the juniors, fresh from his Silver Skates triumph in which he was the most decisive winner in any class. Two of the outstanding midget stars of the Nation, in the persons of Ronny Quinn and Bobby Neilson, will compete and repeat their duel from the Silver States event in which Quinn nosed out Neilson in a race so close most spectators thought it was a dead heat.

Record Entry Expected

Meanwhile, as entries from the various skating associations affiliated with the Amateur Skating Union continue to pour in to Dr. Christopher Meyer, president of the Southeastern Skating Association, which is sponsoring the affair with Uline-Ice-Arena, a record entry list appeared certain yesterday as entries neared the former 155 mark established in 1939. The complete entry list will not be ready for a day or two until the various associations, which closed entries last Saturday at noon, forward the approved skaters.

Tickets for the championships remain on sale at Uline-Ice-Arena box office. Reserved seats are priced at $1.10 and general admission at 75 cents and 55 cents, with a special 25-cent fee for children and high school students who present athletic association cards at the box office. Reservations are being taken at Lincoln 8500.

William C. Gloth Gets Virginia Athletic Post

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 18.—The appointment of William C. Gloth, Arlington attorney, to the University of Virginia's athletic advisory council was announced today by J. Malcolm Luck, alumni secretary.

He was designated by the board of managers of the alumni association to succeed Hunter Faulconer, of Charlottesville, whose three-year term on the committee of three faculty members, three alumni and three students expires in June.

Regarded as the greatest center of his time in the South, Mr. Gloth captained Virginia's only undefeated football team of 1908. Immediately after his graduation he coached at V. M. I. before establishing his law practice in Arlington County, where he was commonwealth's attorney for several terms.

Columbus Coach Feels Sorry For Houck, C. U. Ring Star

You can't blame a guy for being optimistic, but Columbus University's Coach Jim McNamara appears to be spreading out a superabundance as his fighting Explorers get ready for their Saturday night date with Catholic University in the Brookland gymnasium.

The accent will be on the lightheavyweight engagement between the Cardinals' Leo Houck, jr., and Columbus' knockout specialist, Red Doherty—all of which leads works on Mr. McNamara's sympathetic nature.

"Houck's father, who coaches boxing at Penn State, is an awfully good friend of mine," Jim brooded. "I hate like blazes to send my kid in to beat up Leo's boy, but I guess there's no choice in the matter."

Out at Catholic U., however, they have an opinion of their own. Houck, one of the smoothest boxers to come along in recent years, has won two of his college fights and lost the other on what some observers called a fluke decision.

Leo hasn't been called upon to take much punishment—mainly because he knows how to handle himslef in the ring. The hard-punching Doherty, who has won both his fights for Columbus, hasn't had any tough sledding as yet, either, but McNamara is convinced his team has a chance to upset the favored Cards.

Johnnies Beat Western in 26-24 Upset

Unpredictable St. John's High cagers, preparing for a second meeting with Gonzaga tomorrow night, yesterday trimmed Western by a 26-24 count as a result of late baskets by Paddy McCarthy and George Hughes.

After trailing throughout, several times by as many as 8 points, the Johnnies pulled up all even with two minutes of the clash at St. John's remaining. McCarthy dropped a neat 2-pointer, and scant seconds later Hughes accounted for the winning points.

At the respective quarters Western was ahead by 8-3, 15-7 ad 24-17.

Hughes provided the high scoring performance of the day, getting 8 points to lead the Cadets to their sixth triumph in 23 games. Western's high scorers were Hal Mitchell and Irivng Scheneker, each with 7 points.

But at 19:50 it happened. From a scrimmage in the corner the puck bounded in front of the cage. It lay there unchaperoned for a second and then Alf Webster claimed it and with only Colvin to stop him he feinted and rapped in his goal.

Dick, the priceless miscreant, provided early excitement when after he and Burns had been penalized for slashing, he protested so strenuously that Referee Harwood was forced to silence him with a ten-minute misconduct penalty.

Gonzaga Five Smashes G. W. Easily, 45-21

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 18.—Francis Counselman, Gonzaga High School forward, passed the 200 mark in his drive for individual scoring honors in the Metropolitan area here tonight, as he paced the Eagles to an easy 45-21 victory over a scrappy but outclassed George Washington High quintet. It was Gonzaga's fourteenth victory in 19 starts, and the Presidents' fifth consecutive setback.

Counselman went into tonight's game with 189 points to his credit, and racked up 14 points to cop individual scoring honors for the evening.

The Eagles hopped off to a 7-0 lead in the first two minutes of play before the Presidents broke the ice on Denitto's set shot, and their advantage was never seriously pressed. They led 10-2 at the end of the first quarter, 22-7 at the half, and 35-13 at the three-quarter mark.

Despite the one-sided score, the inexperienced G. W. five showed definite improvement over its most recent performance, handling the ball cleverly to work the ball into the scoring zone, only to miss out on numerous lay-up shots because of apparent overanxiousness.

Gonzaga's Mulvihill was runner-up to Counselman for high scoring honors for the Eagles, with 9 points, while lanky Carlton Allen accounted for a like total for the Presidents.

In a preliminary game, the Mount Rainier High School girls' team scored its second victory of the season over the G. W. sextet by a 25-21 margin, Miss Adamson, with 15 points, paced the victors.

Ray Meyer, assistant coach, will have charge of the team in Keogan's absence. The Irish have won ten straight games. They meet Georgia Tech here Saturday night.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 18.—What interests you? Boxing? Well, it won't if there are many more lopsided and as reasonless bouts as the Louis-Dorazio affair.

CONSIDINE

Pro football?—The signing of John Kimbrough for $37,500 ($2,500 down) is the most important dough the pro game has flung around since it became a major sport. Whizzer White was given $15,000 by Pittsburgh, and his contract differed from Kimbrough's in that White was paid the 15 for football, whereas Kimbrough's money is scheduled to come from football, radio, movie-house appearances, etc. It is something like the contract George Marshall has with Sammy Baugh. Baugh is guaranteed about $15,000 a year, but gives Marshall the right to sell him on the indorsement market and collect a portion of what he gets for him.

Nobody, of course, will ever make as much as a pro gridman as Red Grange made. In his first full year as a pro, Red made between $150,000 and $175,000. But getting back to Kimbrough, we got a card from an El Paso admirer today, reading, "Dear Punk: We can't see how in hell you figured that Tommy Harmon represented 'three or four times' the box-office appeal that Kimbrough does. Harmon looked pretty bad against Minnesota, Northwestern and Michigan State. (Howzat?) Also he was terrible in the East-West game. Kimbrough has never been stopped. He is the greatest line pulverizer since Bronko Nagurski. Harmon is a newspaper All-America."

Basketball?—Several clients have written in to complain about Ted Collins' statement that pro basketball is as dead as a mackerel. That's a little unkind, they say, without even stopping to give Collins time to name the mackerel he had in mind.

Artie Coakley, 20 years with the Original Celtics, wants us to state that Ted Collins' Original Celtics, which the radio executive divorced after losing an estimated $50,000, are not the original Originals in 1935-36, but it seems that Collins wanted tour and doing very nicely, and the Original Celtics which Collins gave up were not original. Collins' team really was the original Originals in 1935-36, but it seemed that Collins wanted them to play only in New York and the wanderlust was strong in the team. So Collins and the original Originals split, and Collins picked up another team which he named the Kate Smith Original Celtics. When Mlle. Smith retired from basketball a couple of years later, the club was just called the Original Celtics, though the original Originals were still in business. And still are. See?

The other complaint is from Ben Laird, of Wmby, Appleton, Wis. He says the National Professional Basketball League out there is playing to sell-out audiences and that I should be ashamed.

Track?—Here's a good suggestion from Publicist Bernard Green. He thinks that in view of all the talk about the annual "miles of dimes" campaign that the star foot-runners of the country should put on a special mile race at one of the big indoor track meets. All the crack milers in the country would be invited, as would Greg Rice, the 2-mile champ, who started out in life as a miler. And the money, to be given to the fine work of eradicating infantile paralysis, would be raised by upping the ticket price a dime over the face value of tickets.

The sports industry?—The Department of Commerce has found out that there are 276 baseball establishments in the country and that their total gates last year amounted to $24,940,000 . . . That bowling alleys and pool halls increased in number from 12,412 to 17,644 and from $43,271,000 per year to $87,450,000 . . . That horse and dog race tracks decreased in number from 64 to 56, but increased their revenue from $32,466,000 to $43,507,000 . . . That riding academies increased from 645 to 840 and upped their income from $2,448,000 to $2,875,000 . . . That swimming pools decreased from 698 to 668, but upped income from $1,938,000 to $2,815,000.

Baseball?—"Mungo will be our 'sleeper'" says Larry MacPhail from Havana.

Fishing?—George Ruppert, part owner of the New York Yankees, and fishing enthusiast, wants to give $100 to one Charles Stedry, but can't find him. Stedry won first prize in Ruppert's fishing contest in the fluke class, by landing a 16-pound 15 ounce door-mat, after deciding that he had hooked a whale. He reported it to Ruppert, who now has a C-note for him, but can't find the fellow.

Line forms to the right.

Vanguard of Rejuvenated Nats Goes South; Harris Happy

11 Pitchers, Catcher Off For Florida

Nat Pilot Predicts Successful Season For Masterson; Reach Orlando Today

By Al Hailey

The Washington Nats headed south yesterday and as a parting shot Stanley Raymond Harris predicted a banner year for Walter Masterson, the lanky righthand pitching veteran who is not yet old enough to vote or register for the draft.

Bucky herded a crop of 11 rookies aboard a train bound for the Nats' Orlando, Fla., training camp at 6:30 p. m., cast an affectionate glance at Masterson and then expressed confidence the 1941 edition of the Nats will be better than the club which last year finished in seventh place in the American League race.

"Look at that boy," Harris beam'ed, pointing to Masterson's 6-foot-frame. "I've never seen him so anxious to get down to work. Last year and the year before he was always hanging in the background. But for the past few days he's been in town all pepped up over getting started. That's a good sign and I believe he's due for a big year."

Bucky Satisfied

Harris refused to make any predictions but said he was completely satisfied that "we have a much better club."

"Masterson has great possibilities, and it would really give me a kick to see him come through," Bucky said. "He's always been a favorite of mine, and I've nursed him along without much punishment because you can't expect a 20-year-old kid to develop overnight—unless he's another Feller."

Masterson has added about 10 pounds to his 170-pound frame and says he feels in great shape. He won but 3 games while losing 13 last season.

The rookies—11 pitchers and 1 catcher—make up the largest crop of recruits to Orlando by the Nats for the two weeks of work before the outfielders and infielders report in several years.

The Nats, traveling in 12 lower berths and one upper, will arrive in Orlando today at 3 p. m. and get to work tomorrow morning. The upper berth, incidentally, was assigned to one Joseph Quinn, a pitcher, who could not be identified definitely by either Harris or Secretary Edward B. Eynon, who saw the vanguard off—but that's nothing unusual.

Lot of Strangers

"I guess we'll have some 20 pitchers down there, but I don't think I've seen over 10 of them in action so I cannot say just how much improvement we can expect in our pitching, Harris confessed.

One rookie, who just Sunday night was reported to be still under contract to the Springfield, Mass., baseball club, turned up—Carlton Twyble—but Bucky confessed he's an unknown quantity.

Of the new talent, the work of Harlin Cathey, 6-foot-4 southpaw who won 10 games and lost 8 for Thomasville, Ga., will be watched with special interest by the Nats manager in Orlando.

Face Reds March 9

The Nats' series of spring exhibition games opens in Tampa, Fla., March 9 against the world champion Cincinnati Reds. The Washington club will break camp at Orlando April 9 and arrive in the Capital April 11 for an exhibition game before opening the regular schedule April 14 against the New York Yankees in Griffith Stadium.

Rookie pitchers in the lot leaving here yesterday included Joseph Cleary, of Springfield; William Zinser, of Kinston, N. C. Alex Zukowski, of Greenville, S. C.; Louis Thuman, of the Nats' Charlotte, N. C., farm; Quinn, Twyble, Poydock, Beck and Kennedy—the latter two of the Orlando club. Dick Hahn, a product of the Charlotte farm, is the lone catcher in the lot. The remainder of the pitching and catching staff will join the Nats in Orlando—including a Cuban, fellow name of Mayor. He's a pitcher.

Bucky Says Farewell . . . Hauls Out New Crop of Pitchers

Two U. S. Rinks Beaten In Toronto Tourney

Toronto, Feb. 18 (AP).—One United States rink triumphed and two were beaten in first round matches in the Seiberling Trophy competition of the Ontario Bonspiel today.

Adam Quint Loses League Clash, 46-40

Despite the fine offensive play of Merrill Heddings, towering center, Adam Hats five ran into a dark horse yesterday in the D. C. Recreation Department Basketball League, losing a 46-40 judgment to Census Bureau at Tech gym. Heddings had 11 points, while Census' best pointmaker was Dwortz, with 10 points.

Other games at Tech saw Jacobson Florists smash Nebraska A. C., 54-28, and United Typewriters take an equally lop-sided triumph over Maritime Commission, 61-35.

Four games at Macfarland Junior High found Polish Club taking the feature over F. D. I. C., 23-20. Hot Shoppes turned back PWA, 31-23; Greek Americans trounced the Greyhounds, 24-14, and Mails-Files tripped Washington Loan, 31-25.

A., took the measure of the Harvesters, 39-14. Eastern gym's only action saw Eckington nose out Census Ranchers, 21-20, and the Ramblers trim the Census Farmers, 19-17.

V. M. I. Hands Maryland 19th Defeat, 41-27

V. M. I. won its seventh game in the Southern Conference at College Park last night as the Keydets handed the Old Liners their nineteenth straight defeat, 41-27, in Ritchie Coliseum.

Maryland drew first blood in the opening session with a snow bird under the basket to take the lead. Bert Woodward, V. M. I. forward, evened the count, and from here on the Old Liners were never a serious threat. After Foster and Williams tallied for the Southerners the Terrapin defense held the Keyet five at bay for a few minutes.

Hassett Must Work Out Here Week Before Bout With Conn

Commission Issues Order After Alvis-Turner Row Is Aired at Special Meeting

After a meeting which resulted in a bitter argument between Washington's two boxing promoters, the District Boxing Commission yesterday approved Ray Alvis' application for a March 7 fight date at Uline's Arena and ordered Irish Danny Hassett to appear here a week before his March 6 battle with Billy Conn.

Commission Chairman Claude W. Owen explained the Hassett step as a measure to protect the public. The Philadelphia Irishman will work out for a week here under close supervision.

The agreement on the March 17 date for Alvis, who is copromoting the Conn-Hassett battle with Mike Jacobs, followed a long, drawn-out argument between Joe Turner and Alvis.

Alvis Is Accused

Turner accused Alvis of trying to "steal" his proposed Harry Jeffra-Joe Archibald fight—which has since gone on the rocks.

In return, Alvis dubbed Turner "Weeping Joe," said he wasn't trying to pick any arguments with anybody and just wanted to get on with building up interest in the Conn-Hassett fight scheduled for Uline's.

Eddie Walker, manager of New York's Chalky Wright, was invited to Washington from New York by Turner and Gabe Menendez, but complicated matters by showing up at the commission meeting in the company of Alvis.

Turner said he had been promised "by word" the services of Wright against Petey Scalzo in a world's featherweight championship fight. Alvis said this was a lot of tosh, that he had been "dickering" for the match, but didn't want it anyway now.

Walker gave out with a lot of double talk and said he hadn't signed with anybody. He added Alvis, however, had topped Turner's offer.

Asks the Question

"Now what promoter do you propose to work for in Washington, Mr. Walker," said Commissioner Owen, momentarily getting down to the original purpose of the meeting.

"Oh, I'll fight Archibald anytime for anybody who makes the biggest offer, but what I want to know is anybody up there making stooges of these guys down here, I mean Turner, my old pal," countered Eddie. "Will you have a cigar?"

Commissioner Owen patiently explained the meeting was to be confined to the Wright-Scalzo problem—a mistake which prompted Turner to complain that Alvis had tried to outbid him for fights after Alvis had learned he was trying to book same.

Walker suddenly staged a comeback with his memory and remarked that, come to think of it, he had signed a contract with a Washington promoter—Alvis, for instance. At this point a fire truck whirled by outside and we went to the fire, just for a little relaxation.

HAILEY.

Brewers Face Bruins Tonight

The most picturesque home town professional basketball rivalry ever featured locally is scheduled for Joe Turner's Arena tonight at 9 o'clock when the Washington Brewers, of the American Basketball League, meet the Washington Bruins, District Negro professional champions.

Indications late yesterday were that a complete sell-out of Turner's Arena is due.

The Bruins, loaded down with some of the Nation's finest Negro professional talent, have lost only one game in ten starts and will be at full strength for the Brewers tonight. Outstanding in their line-up are two players who formerly represented the original New York Renaissance, namely: Tarzan Cooper and Soupy Campbell.

Cooper is a towering 6 foot, 7 inch center with all around ability and Campbell, one of the best shots in the country.

St. James Five Wins 31-30

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 18.—Armand Newmyer, Sidwell-Friends School forward, contributed 18 points to his team's behalf here today, but it wasn't enough to stave off a 31-to-30 defeat at the hands of St. James' School.

With the score tied and only 45 seconds left to play, Forward Wallace, of the hosts, rammed home a foul shot to decide matters.

From the opening whistle today's game was closely contested, Friends holding leads of 8 to 7 and 14 to 13 after the first two stanzas, but falling behind a 22-to-21 count going into the last period.

Wright Rolls All-Time High At Penn

William Wright, Intra-Service team of the Soil Conservation League at Penn Recreation, is the proud possessor of an all-time league record which he rolled last night. Even though Wright missed six singles, he totaled 443 for set which added 39 sticks to the previous high mark. Wright also had high game of 178 and his fine bowling made it easy for his team to take top totals with 628 for game and 1,712 for set. Wright is an 114-average man.

Mildred Peacock, Sanford's, Inc., was top game roller in the Maryland-D. C. Ladies play at Silver Spring with a nice 147 hut Agnes Collins, National Ale, took the set after a pinfall of 376. Sanford's won team highs with 604-1,670, both marks third highs for the season. National Ale came close for set with a 1,669 count. Sanford's won all three from the Beeques while National Ale rolled a sweep over Shaffer Flower Shop.

Miss Wellingham Shines

The Ladies Lutheran Church League at Arcadia was paced by Margaret Wellingham, Keller Memorial, whose 135-325 tops aided her girls in winning team highs after pinfalls of 541-1,448.

Lannie Blaine, Diamond Appliance, was the leading scorer in the American League's play at Silver Spring. Blaine had high game of 171 and went on to a 438 set which came within 10 sticks of tying the leage high. The Diamond boys, inspired by Blaine, won team highs with 643 and 1,859. Wright Jewelers led with Silver Springs Market and Liberty Wall Paper following.

The Adams boys were best for team highs, winning out with 614 and 1,756. Cameo and Western Electric won all three from May Hardware and Graybar, respectively, with Cameo going into first over Western.

Berger to Referee Hornet, Dusek Blood Bank Match

Argument Over Third Man Settled; Masked Wrestler Claimed Casey Gave Raw Decision Last Week

The row over who will referee tomorrow night's return wrestling match between The Green Hornet, masked matman, and Ernie Dusek, the wild man from Nebraska, has been settled.

Casey Berger, guard at the Washington Airport, who once was no mean grappler himself, will be the third man in the ring at Turner's Arena along about 10 o'clock when The Hornet drapes his 260-pound, 6-ft.-3 frame around Ernie for their 90-minute time limit brawl.

The Children's Hospital Blood Bank, sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV, will benefit from the show to the extent of 10 per cent of the gross proceeds.

Threatened Walkout

Previously The Hornet had threatened a possible walkout if Promoter Turner decided to use Berger as referee, because as the masked man explains, Berger gave what he called a "raw decision" in last week's match with the Dusek. The Hornet says it would be impossible for Berger to render a decision with his (The Hornet's) legs dangling outside the ropes.

Dusek, however, said Berger was in the right and that he wanted only the husky airport ward to handle the match. When Promoter Turner reminded the big boys that the match was for a "worthy cause—Blood Bank." The Hornet relented, said "Go ahead and use the man you want, Joe."

A strong supporting card is on tap. Rudy Dusek will meet Lou Plummer in the semiwindup. Warren Bockwinkle will tackle Joe DeValteau, French refugee wrestler; Fred Grobmier will tackle Hy Kulkovich, and Leo Macaluso, former Colgate All-American, will tackle Eddie Newman.

Tickets are on sale at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest.

Baseball Meeting

Don Goodman's Studebaker Champions baseball team will hold its first meeting of the season tonight at 9 o'clock at the home of its manager, 1910 Sixteenth Street Northwest. All candidates are urged to attend.

Golf for the Family

Sarazen Plans Streamlined Club

By Whitney Martin
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Feb. 18.—Membership in private golf clubs costs too much, Gene Sarazen says, and he's going to try to prove a club can operate without the treasurer seeing red every time he puts pen to paper. In other words, he has a scheme to keep the country set from going set, financially.

"Streamlined golf," he calls it, and he's going to put it in operation at the Lakeview Country Club, of which he is president. The club formerly was the Mount Vernon Country Club. It is about 30 minutes from Manhattan up in Westchester County, and is the same course over which the Connecticut squire qualified for his twenty-first national open last year.

Members Complaining

Sarazen has been around a bit in the last two decades, and he has watched with a quizzical eye the efforts of scores of clubs to keep up a front while the wolf was howling at the back door. He knows all about the special assessments and the invitations to buy bonds, if the member doesn't want to see the rolling fairways sprinkled with cows or plowed with spring wheat.

GENE SARAZAN

"You and I know the terrific financial burden that has befallen private clubs," he says. "Members continually are complaining about the high charges for using the club and its facilities only a few times a year.

All Comforts of Home

"Now my clubs," he continued, with no more pride than a kid with a new bike, "offers all of the advantages of private club atmosphere with reasonable dues for the season and modest charges for the use of the facilities only when the member uses the facilities. No assessments. No purchase of bonds."

As nearly as can be figured, Sarazen is going to operate a club that is half way between a rich man's hideout and a poor man's public playground. Membership is limited to a selected 250 regulars and 75 associate women members. Men's dues are $60 a year, and $100 takes care of a family. The member pays $1 green fees every day he plays.

It sounds sensible, this low-cost golf on a high class layout, and if the squire's idea pans out, it will be copied. It fills a gap between the public links and the snooty, how-much-have-you-got clubs.

Challedon Proves Soundness in 'Betless' Santa Anita Test

Brann Star Qualifies for $100,000 Race

Wisbeck Finishes First in 'Workout' Event; Challedon's Trainer Satisfied

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 18.—Challedon demonstrated today that he still can be ranked as a big contender in the coming $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

The Maryland invader, running in a special "betless race" between regular events at Santa Anita Park, turned in his hardest effort since coming off the shelf last fall and emerged from the stiff 7-furlong trial evidently sound as a dollar.

The special event was arranged by Challedon's owner, William L. Brann, to determine for himself and the public how his mighty champion was coming along in his training program for the big handicap March 1. The training schedule had been interrupted seriously by a hoof injury and bad weather.

Five Horses in "Race"

Challedon, under colors, went to the post with five other horses, including Rough Pass, another candidate for the Santa Anita Handicap. The test was carried out in regulation style with the exception that the public was not permitted to bet on the outcome.

At the half mile post, Wisbech broke to serve as a fresh pacesetter for Challedon. Wisebech managed to cross the finish line a length in front of Challedon, with Rough Pass trailing the Marylander. Challedon was clocked at 1 minute 26 3-5 seconds flat for the 7 furlongs. The track was slow.

Carried 126 Pounds

He carried 126 pounds, 4 less than he will carry March 1. Jockey George Woolf was in the saddle.

"Compared to the last time I rode him, I'd say he ran easily and was at no time extended," Woolf said. "I thought he ran all right. I didn't think he was tiring. He was puffing a little at the finish, though."

Challedon broke sluggishly but soon hit into a long stride. L. C. Whitehill, his trainer, said he was satisfied.

Challedon, he added, would run in the $10,000 San Antonio Handicap Saturday, last big stake before the Santa Anita Handicap.

The latter, well handled, took command entering the stretch, but faltered when the real test came. OUR GRACE, buffeted about, ran better than the chart shows.

LADY LYONORS, steadied off the pace until well straightened into the stretch, closed with a rush when placed to pressure and won going away. MERITORIOUS, rated back off the leaders the first 6 furlongs, assumed command at the furlong pole, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. WELL ALLRIGHT, prominent contender all the way, held on well in the final drive. MEXICANA showed good speed while saving ground, but weakened in the stretch run.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AGRICOLE (entry), $9.70, $5.40, out; CADMIUM (entry), $5.40, out; WHIRLAWAY, out.

AGRICOLE followed BOLIVAR closely under restraint to the stretch turn, where he took command and bore out, but came away again in the final furlong to win going away. CADMIUM, saving much ground after leaving the backstretch, bade a bold effort, but was not the equal of his stablemate. WHIRLAWAY broke well and went closer up than usual in the early stages and moved up stoutly on the stretch turn, but flattened out baldly in the final drive. MAEMANTE had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Melbourne, Grade C. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:07. Off 3:07½. Winner, J. W. Brown's br. g. FAIRFLAX, running in his best form, moved up with determination when straightened into the stretch, disposed of the leaders and won in hand. BRIGHT TRACE, in the thick of contention all the way, held on well in the final drive. MAR LE, ridden wide the entire trip, finished with a belated rush in the last furlong. PRINCIPAL stopped badly after displaying high early speed.

SUNDODGER, going close up and saving much ground entering the stretch, closed gamely under punishment and outstayed his opposition when the final issue came. POTRANCO, on the outside and forcing a rapid early pace, was carried out slightly turning into the stretch and finished gamely to place. CHERRY JAM, down in the final furlong, quickest to begin, showed the most foot and came slightly wide coming into the stretch, but held on gamely in the drive.

WHITE HOPE gradually improved his position on the outside the last half mile, wore the leaders down through the stretch and won as his rider pleased. FIRE FINCH, quickest away, showed the most speed, but faltered in the final drive, yet held the others safe. BUTTERMILK, vigorously ridden, gained steadily while circling the field to wear MIGHTILY down in the last strides. MIGHTILY, well up early, quit in the stretch run.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

Spring isn't here, but yesterday's mail brought a sure sign in a batch of publicity on the 1941 Kentucky Derby from Frank G. Menke. This Menke is tops in sports drum-beating and the race writer who uses nothing but his "handouts" between now and Derby Day will have a lot of readers. If you read racing news, you will be getting a lot of Menke's copy because the scribes hop it. He is the No. 1 authority on the Derby and his stuff is clean-cut and faultlessly written. Here's one of his releases: Ocean Blue, a brown colt, son of Blue Larkspur—Anchors Ahead, is a real "dark horse" among the 3-year-old eligibles for the Kentucky Derby, on May 3. Bred and owned by Crispin Oglebay, and trained by J. P. Jones, the son of Blue Larkspur raced only twice as a 2-year-old, winning one, finishing second upon the other occasion, and with total earnings of only $1,200 for the year. But there's a suspicion that this fellow may be one of the greatest of 3-year-olds. Oglebay and Jones have been unstinting in praise; the clockers of 1940 ranked him high, and the final stamp of approval was placed upon him by John Campbell, the handicapper. Campbell placed him sixteenth on his list of 102 outstanding 3-year-olds on January 1, 1941. He put him ahead of such as Blue Delight, Bryan Station, Magnificent, Stimady, Swing and Swang, Tangled, Valdina Myth, Chicuelo, Misty Isle, Nasca, Strange Device and others which helped to make 2-year-old racing history in 1940. Ocean Blue didn't make his debut until November at Pimlico, due to a succession of bucked shins. Running 6 furlongs against a fair sort of field, he won easily, and impressed by his smooth ride. He ran his second and final race at Pimlico, his rivals including Misty Isle Magnificent, Hy-Cop, Harvard Square and others. Ocean Blue broke well, was out in front to the stretch, and then Harvard Square charged and ran away from Ocean Blue. The outcome of the race left the experts with divided opinions. Some said that Ocean Blue was just a sprinter—with nothing much in the way of stamina. Others insisted the defeat was the jockey's fault—that he had become overconfident and let the horse loaf. Oglebay and Jones said nothing. They just shipped the colt back to the farm—and then entered Ocean Blue in every 3-year-old stake for which he is eligible. BILL.

First rce—LIBERTY shapes up as the right one in this field of maiden juveniles. Has speed and the veteran Arcaro will do the riding. KEEKEE has had several chances and could be prominent. BOLD QUESTION is fast but must overcome the rail position.

Second race—CAVE HILL appears nicely placed in this turf course battle at a mile and a half. Don Meade will do the booting and the combination looks as if it should be first to the wire. HALLIE gets in light and should be prominent. COUNTY BOUND will be dangerous if in action.

THIR RACE—SPITEFUL could be the right one in this field of fillies and mares. Favors the distance and Robertson should give us a good ride. ATTRACTING and TOP QUEEN to fill out the money basket.

Fourth race—BONZAR is tossed in this with 102 pounds and promises to do a lot of running. The distance and the brand of opposition suits. The Gration Entry of CHIN MUSIC and SUPREME CHANCE

Stock Market Turns Irregularly Lower After Feeble Rally; Turnover Is Sluggish

New York, Feb. 18—The stock market tried for another feeble rally today but buying interest waned at the last and prices turned irregularly lower.

The list stiffened after a hesitant start, then again turned soft in spots as the proceedings drew to a close.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .1 of a point at 40.2. Trends on the whole, were meaningless, it was said, because of the sluggishness of dealings. The turnover of 320,000 shares compared with 356,720 yesterday and was one of the smallest since last September.

Of 661 individual stocks traded—exactly the same number as on Monday and about half the aggregate listed on the exchange—285 were down, 182 up and 194 unchanged.

Restraining market influences, brokers suggested, included the Bulgar-Turk accord, which was considered at least a temporary setback for the British, persistent apprehension over Far Eastern affairs and further testimony before Congressional committees stressing the proximity of the United States to actual entry into the European war.

Business news, topped by regular and special dividends, favorable earnings statements, further expansion of commercial loans, continued growth of department store sales, predicted record motor production for February, and mounting rail revenues, brought some encouragement to bullish forces.

Among stocks, Coca-Cola dropped 3 points at 88 on light transactions. Lesser losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, American Telephone and Douglas Aircraft.

Retaining modest advances were American Tobacco "B," Davison Chemical, Great Northern, Chesapeake & Ohio, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville and Goodyear.

Bonds were mixed, with carrier securities doing a bit better than other groups. Most major commodities displayed rising tendencies. Wheat at Chicago was up ⅞ to 1⅜ cents a bushel and corn gained ⅛ to 1. Cotton advanced 20 to 55 cents a bale.

In an uneven Curb, improvement was held by Glen Alden Coal, Humble Oil, American Cyanamid "B," Phoenix Securities and Venezuelan Petroleum. Off small amounts were Electric Bond & Share, Cities Service, Brewster Aero and Republic Aviation. Volume approximated 93,000 shares versus 86,000 Monday.

Cotton Futures

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Buyers of cotton futures were forced to bid prices up 4 to 11 points today in a market only thinly supplied with contracts. The paucity of offerings mirrored a similar scarcity of raw cotton in Southern spot centers and smaller turnover in spot cotton due to slackened mill demand. Memphis brokers and other Southern interests were the principal sellers.

Considerable switching from nearby to forward deliveries also developed, apparently based on the theory that only minor changes would be made in the Administration's farm program. Worth Street textile dealers reported substantial sales of industrial goods and coarse yarn fabrics. Business in print cloths was slim but prices held firm.

New York Central Freight Traffic Jumps in Week

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad today reported freight cars handled last week totaled 90,875, largest for any week since the period ended October 26, 1940, when the total was 91,389. At that time traffic normally runs at the highest levels of the year.

F. E. Williamson, president of the road, announced that 50 new locomotives for fast freight and passenger use and 36 oil-electric engines for switching use have just been placed in service and that 10,583 new freight cars are being added to the line's rolling stock.

He said the New York Central's fleet of passenger cars is being increased to about 5,000 through the purchase of 128 new cars and the rebuilding of 115 other coaches.

Week's Gold Imports Continue Light

The Commerce Department, giving this figure yesterday, said principal imports in the period ended February 10 were $2,918,801 from Canada, $1,258,071 from the Philippine Islands, and $1,218,105 from the United Kingdom.

Sugar Futures

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Distant deliveries on domestic sugar futures reached top levels for the season today on buying based on a firm spot raw market and continued concern over the tight freight situation. Final prices were unchanged to 2 points higher on sales of 31,600 tons.

Late liquidation forced the world list back after an early rally. Final prices were 2½ points down to 1 up on sales of 2,350 tons: March, .68 bid; May, .71½ bid.

Spot raw suzar sold at 2.98 cents a pound, a decline of 2 points, but later business was reported at 3 cents.

$100,000,000 Machine Tool 'Pool' Planned

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 18.—The American Machinist said today the Army and Navy were reported ready to go ahead with a plan to finance the ordering of a $100,000,000 reservoir of unallocated machine tools and thus enable manufacturers to arrange their production programs far in advance.

The trade publication added that "the worst hump in tooling up plants for production of munitions will be over by May or June.

As the defense program gains momentum, the Friday-night-to-Monday morning blackout is gradually disappearing from the metal-working industry with more companies going to 5½ and 6 day weeks.

"The machine tool industry's output this year will be approximately $62,000,000 a month, as compared with a normal annual volume of $100,000,000."

The magazine said the priority system for machine tools was being tightened and that demand for defense purposes had become so heavy the Government had asked the industry to stop making deliveries after February 28 to customers without priority ratings.

"Military plane production passed the 1,000-a-month mark in January and should continue to rise with fair rapidity this spring. Actual orders on hand are for 41,000 planes, from trainers to four-engine, long-range bombers. The Army will take 19,000, the Navy 6,000 and the British 16,000. It will be the middle of 1942, however, before deliveries are completed. The British are getting almost all of our combat planes at present."

Air Express Records Shattered in Year

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Feb. 18.—Air express shipments passed the 1,000,000 mark in 1940, the largest one-year total in the 13-year history of the service, the Railway Express Agency reported today. Regularly scheduled airplanes of 17 major airlines transported 1,078,189 shipments in 1940, an increase of 23.81 per cent over 1939. Air express tonnage was up to 3,850 tons in 1940, an increase of 31.61 per cent.

Chemical Firms Plan Heavier Construction

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Contracts awarded on current construction projects in the chemical process industries has increased to $14,230,000 from $11,342,000 a year ago, "Chemical & Metallurgical Engineering" said today. Proposed work totals $3,910,000.

Boston Wool

Boston, Feb. 18 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—A fair demand existed in the Boston wool market today for the finer grades of foreign wools. A little more interest was apparent also in the medium grades of South American wools. Interest in domestic wools centered largely in contracting in the new wool clip. Dealers were reported to have paid 35 to 38 cents, in the grease, for some of the Texas wool contracts. Prices estimated at $1 to $1.05, scoured basis, were paid for some of the territory wools being contracted.

Security Drop Delays Large New Offerings

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 18.—Postponement of two proposed corporate security flotations, including a $90,000,000 refunding offering by the Republic Steel Corporation, was attributed in financial quarters today to the decline in stock and bond markets the past month.

Likewise brought to a standstill pending improvement in market conditions, it appeared, was over-the-counter sale of listed stocks. The counter sales off the New York Stock Exchange in the first few weeks of the new year were among the heaviest in history of Wall Street as dealers sold large blocks of prominent securities from British holdings and private estates.

The Republic Steel financing was expected to be brought out publicly Thursday. Instead the company directors and underwriters decided to defer plans awaiting better markets. Some dealers suggested the offering might be made next week.

Philip Morris & Co., tobacco manufacturers, with headquarters at Richmond, notified stockholders of the postponement of a projected offering of 148,991 shares of preferred stock to common shareholders.

O. L. Chalkley, president, said the company hoped to carry out the stock sale "in the near future" on the original terms or "as revised to meet changed conditions."

Meanwhile word came from Cleveland that directors of Standard Oil Co. of Ohio had decided, "because of developments in the securities markets," to defer a proposed offering of 150,000 shares of new 4 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

Meanwhile bond dealers looked forward to one of the largest Treasury financing operations in history in the planned refunding of $1,200,000,000 in maturing issues next month.

Hints from Washington the Treasuray might seek $800,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 in cash besides the refunding foreshadowed something like $2,000,000,000 in nearby Treasury financing.

Overton Plan Yield for D. C. Up a Million

By James D. Secrest

Revised estimates of the Overton fiscal formula late yesterday disclosed that it would produce a Federal payment of slightly more than $9,000,000 on the basis of the 1942 District budget as plans were made to introduce a bill embodying it simultaneously in the House and the Senate.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, newly-appointed chairman of the fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee, stated he would sponsor the formula in the House as he called an executive conference on District taxes for next Tuesday.

He explained that the land-ratio formula would be one of the revenue measures discussed with District officials and Virginia and Maryland members of Congress whose districts are adjacent to the National Capital.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent earlier in the day submitted figures to Senator Overton showing that Federal land holdings within the District have increased since the original formula was introduced in the Senate two years ago.

Million More in Prospect

As the general revenues of the District likewise have increased since 1939, the formula, which is applied to the general revenue fund, would produce almost $1,000,000 more than two years ago and $3,000,000 more than the current "compromise" Federal payment.

The revised formula is based on a computation that land owned by the United States in the District, minus certain exemptions, aggregates 8,322 acres.

The total land area of the Capital is found to be 44,317 acres. Of this 5,040 acres are covered by water and so deducted, leaving 39,275 acres of dry land.

Excluded from the total acreage of land owned by the United States are the following: (1) streets, avenues, roads and alleys; (2) 56 per cent of the city's park areas; and (3) any such land used exclusively by the District government.

The only difference in these exemptions from the original Overton formula is that the park exemption has been raised from 50 to 56 per cent.

The 56 per cent deduction for parks amounts to 4,207 acres, while the United States land used by the District aggregates 302 acres. Total land holdings of the United States in District, exclusive of that devoted to highway purposes, are 12,831 acres.

Ratio Is 21 Per Cent

The ratio of the 8,320 acres of United States land to the 39,273 acres of dry land in the District is 21 per cent. The 1942 general revenue estimate is approximately $43,000,000. Twenty-one per cent of $43,000,000 is roughly $9,000,000.

Representative Hunter said that the Tuesday conference would deal principally with the amendments to the District income tax law asked by the commissioners.

Lillian Roth Accuses Husband Of Attack With Deadly Weapon

He Hurled Telephone At Her in Argument Over Son, She Charges

—2-24T ROTH

By the United Press

Hollywood, Feb. 18.—Actress Lillian Roth tonight asked for the arrest of her estranged husband, Eugene Weiner, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon—a telephone—which she claimed he hurled at her face.

The dark-haired New York actress, who has appeared both in the films and on the stage, made her complaint to police from a bed in St. Vincent's Hospital where she was taken for treatment of numerous bruises which she told officers were inflicted by Weiner.

After investigating officers made their report on the case, Police Inspector F. E. Hawtrey issued an order for Weiner to be brought in for questioning. Inspector Hawtrey said that Miss Roth also accused Weiner of taking a large sum of money from her and a paid-up annuity policy.

The alleged assault occurred last night, Miss Roth told Detective Lieut. Bert Carothers, and followed a quarrel over Weiner's son, 10-year-old Eugene, jr., whose custody she is seeking in court.

"Little Eugene goes to military school but comes home on weekends," Miss Roth told the officer. "This week, to spite me, Mr. Weiner returned him to school a day ahead of time.

"When I asked why he had done that, he knocked me down with his fist and tore my clothes. Then he struck me with a telephone and left me on the floor of the apartment."

LILLIAN ROTH

Miss Roth also accused her estranged husband of taking $650 in cash and $450 in travelers checks before departing in her automobile.

The actress' attorney, Ray Sandler, said that Miss Roth Long has desired to adopt Eugene, jr., and that Weiner repeatedly has promised to grant her permission to take the legal steps but never has gone through with it. Miss Roth's petition for custody of the youth is scheduled to be heard this Thursday in Superior Court.

2 Labor Board Investigators Are Arrested

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Feb. 18.—Two men engaged in investigations for the National Labor Relations Board were arrested today, and Harold A. Cranefield, attorney here for the board's regional office, tonight accused the police of failing to heed requests for "protection of witnesses."

The arrests were made, Cranefield said, while a labor board field examiner and a witness were seeking to question an employe of the Ford Motor Co. over a complaint of unfair labor practices against Ford. The police blotter showed that the two were held 45 minutes and released without charge.

Immediately upon being informed of Cranefield's charge, Police Commissioner Frank D. Eaman denied it and, in turn, charged that Cranefield had falsely accused him (Eaman) of conspiring with Harry Bennett, Ford personnel chief, to thwart action on complaints against Ford.

Commissioner Eaman said that the board field examiner and his companion, whom Cranefield described as a witness for the board, were taken into "technical custody" on complaint of the Ford worker. The latter, Eaman said, charged that he had been annoyed.

Tank Building Priority Issue Before OPM

Copyright by New York Times

Detroit, Feb. 18.—Current administration of the priorities system in defense operations threatens at this time to disrupt the tank-building program around which the Army has built its plans for development of mechanization.

Most of this machinery was ordered last August, but in one way or another, other operators on Government contracts appear to have taken over much of it.

A $20,000,000 tank factory on the outskirts of Detroit, designed to mass-produce 1,000 25-ton tanks a year, will be completed, as far as construction is concerned, by April 1. Delays already encountered in obtaining delivery on machinery, however, raise a serious question whether tanks will be rolling out of the factory by early fall.

Most of the essential machinery was ordered last August. About one-third of it has been delivered. Civilian and Army officials here think that another third will come in on schedule, but they are most uncertain about the final third. All of the machinery must be on hand before production can start, else there can be no assembly-line operation at all.

That is the current report of one major defense operation intended to demonstrate the efficient manner in which civilian industry could be geared to the defense program.

Solution of the problem rests entirely in the hands of the priorities board of the O. P. M., in association with the munitions boards of the Army and Navy.

The men responsible for the tank program, with whom this correspondent surveyed that operation, are disappointed but not critical of the program. They feel that if the tank program must be deferred in the face of greater need for airplanes and naval vessels, there is no alternative. But they hope a way can yet be devised to carry out this program on schedule, both from the standpoint of personal pride and public morale.

Home Defense Plan Studied By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that he is perfecting a home defense plan, to be published within a week or two, to inform the Nation how middle-aged men and women, and even boys and girls, may find their proper roles in the whole national defense program.

The President's disclosure was inspired by a letter from a World War Marine to the Cleveland Plain Dealer in which the veteran inquired what he could do to help his country in time of emergency. After reading the letter to his press conference, the President leaned back in his chair and mused aloud somewhat in this fashion:

In other words, this is an inquiry from one of the older fellows who don't quite know what they should do. That is one of the things we have given a lot of thought to. Men and women who want to do something back home. Too old to go to the front. They want to do something. That much overworked word, priority, applies to people as well as to machines and tools. People who are doing many kinds of useful work in their own communities might well stay there.

He Does His Part

Continuing, President Roosevelt said he got a letter the other day from a 52-year-old driver of a school bus in the President's home county of Dutchess in New York. The driver said he took the kids to school but wanted to do something for his country. Well, said the President, someone has to take the kids to school, and the driver is performing a good service as well as he can, and he ought to be satisfied as he is really doing something.

The same is true, the President went on, of the fellow who runs a garage, repairing cars and filling them with gasoline, as he is performing a useful service.

Likewise true is this, said the President, of the girl behind the counter in a department store: She is doing her duty and is rendering a service to the country.

We have not yet got to the point that men and women will have to leave their normal occupations and be put on something else, the President said, and he hoped that point never would be reached. Many people, he said, don't know how to use a tool in a defense factory, but they are doing as good a job if they are making suits and dresses and baking bread, just as much as if they were turning out guns in the factory, and therefore they ought to feel satisfied that they are doing something.

As time rolls on, the President said, it may be necessary to do a little picking and choosing from civilian workers to increase the defense personnel, but at present the increase of defense work is proceeding in a normal way.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"The Government is spending $27,000,000,000 for defense and it's up to us to see it's spent wisely! Who put a 3-cent stamp on this letter when a 2 would have done as well?

Listen! with Glynn

You couldn't have a better O. Henry story than CBS's "Court of Missing Heirs" turned up last night.

It was the case of George Ruge, a 70-year-old errand "boy," who discovered through the program that he was the rightful heir to $6,500, which I, and even you, I suspect, would consider a welcome addition to our bank roll.

But George had been unable to find work for something like three years. He'd been living at the Mills Hotel—rooms 40 cents a night—whenever he had money enough. He was pretty grateful when he got nickels and dimes enough to get him a meal and a night's lodging besides.

The "Court of Missing Heirs," on February 4, broadcast the fact that George's brother, William, who died in upstate New York in 1929, and who hadn't seen George since 1928, had left his estate to George. A clerk in the Mills Hotel remembered George's being an occasional visitor there. Sort of bursting with excitement, he had to wait three nights until George appeared again, happily exhibiting his 40 cents. George got in touch with the "Court" and easily verified his claim.

So last night—if you haven't already heard this over WJSV—he told of his first expenditure. It probably set something of a precedent, but it was a party for all his old friends at the Mills Hotel—the catering by Sherry's, better known by the 400. It was complete with the $1,000 silver service and champagnes.

Contract Bridge

The weak overcall gives the adversaries a "fielder's choice" of taking penalty points or going ahead to play at their own contract, and the player who makes such overcalls habitually, will surely come out the loser.

Shown in today's box is one of the hands which helped Mr. S. and Bob Jacoby lose the 72-point rubber. It is marked by one of these typically weak overcalls, vulnerable, as Mr. S. for absolutely no reason at all, took a set of five tricks. There was no need for special defensive tactics when he and his partner were out in front with a game and 60 points; but, seemingly, Mr. S just can't stay out of the bidding of any hand if his cards will offer the least encourgement. Only by such suicidal tactics as these could our hero lose a 72-point rubber with the start he had.

The opponents made short and profitable work of him during the play, South won the first trick with the king of spades, following with the ace and a low spade, giving North a ruff. The king of diamonds was next led, declarer's ace taking. Mr. S., somewhat feebly, qlayed the heart king. North won the ace, casher the diamond queen and the club king and qlayed a low club to his partner. Upon taking the club ace. South ran in his jack of diamonds and offered the coup de grace to our optimistic declarer with a spade lead.

Mr S. had the dubious choice of trumping with the heart jack, in which case North would discard and take bot h the queen and nine of hearts on the next play or ruffing with the heart of eight, in the hope that South might hold the heart nine and lose to an over-ruff and the heart queen.

The defending players thus won four heart tricks, two spades, two clubs and two diamonds a total of ten tricks; while Mr. S., who had gayly overcalled, vulnerable, took three tricks at a contract to win eight for a puny penalty—for him—of 1,400 points.

Trade Barriers Between States Called a Peril

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Elimination of interstate trade barriers which form a threat to national unity or to the defense program was urged on the Temporary National Economic Committee yesterday by officials of the Department of Commerce.

Pointing out that the defense effort was America's most important present consideration, Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor asserted that "State barriers which interfere with maximum production . . . must be lifted."

However, TNEC Chairman O'Mahoney sharply criticized the department's proposal for the creation of a continuing joint Federal-State committee to study the trade barrier problem and to propose solutions to Congress.

"Congress has all the power now to obtain this information. The trouble is, it doesn't exercise it," commented Senator O'Mahoney. "I don't see much hope for the development of individual security by constantly expanding our Government—I don't think Big Government is the cure."

Undersecretary Taylor told the Committee it should make no recommendations "which could in any way slow down our national defense effort, or interfere with our ability to act forcibly and effectively as a unified Nation."

"After we have placed ourselves in a position to defend ourselves as a Nation," he said, "we can review the situation as it then exists, but until we are in that position, industry, agriculture, labor and finance must ben every effort to meet the national needs."

Taylor, a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, declared that external events had so greatly altered the Nation's economic situation that "instead of attempting to stimulate competition in certain fields ,the Government finds it must take measures to control it."

"The needs of the Government itself are so great that it cannot permit private individuals to compete with Government for what appear to be scanty supplies of essential materials . . . During the short span of eight years we have traveled from almost complete industrial stagnation to the necessity of allocating production in some important areas, from almost Nation-wide unemployment to serious labor shortage in certain specialized fields," he said.

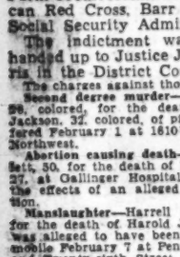
Influenza Puts District's No. 1 Select in Hospital

The District's No. 1 selectee, 21-year-old Harry R. Bell, who was the first local registrant to have his number called and was sent to Edgewood Arsenal December 16, was in Walter Reed Hospital yesterday with "a touch of influenza."



BELL

On his second trip home since his induction, Bell suffered a bad cold Saturday night and was taken to the military hospital with a temperature of 104. He is expected to be in the hospital two weeks.

Bell, who lives at 618 Rock Creek Church Road, was the first District selectee to be promoted to private first class. He had expected to represent the Edgewood post in a boxing tournament here Friday.

Winant Calls on U. S. to Send Britain Arms

By the Associated Press

Concord, N. H., Feb. 18.—John G. Winant, newly appointed Ambassador to Great Britain, urged today that this country serve as a source of "supply against aggressor nations" and provide England with needed tools in order that it "might finish the job."

Frequently cheered as he addressed a joint session of the New Hampshire Leglislature, the former New Hampshire Governor declared that "what we do together can never fail."

"There is nothing today that in my opinion means so much in this country as unity in support of right action," he asserted. "Everybody counts."

Referring to the last months he was in Geneva as director of the International Labor Office, Winant said:

"Many of the men with whom I have been well acquainted in European countries now are killed or imprisoned.

"Workers in those countries have been denied the right to organize. I saw not hundreds, but thousands and thousands of families driven out of their homes by the invader.

"That's what happens to you and to workers and to farm people who come under the heel of an invader."

The Ambassador said that England had asked for tools "that they might finish the job. We can stand with them as free men in the comradeship of hard work, not asking but giving . . . With God's will and a just cause we can do no less."

Concord, N. H., Feb. 18 (INS).—After John G. Winant today addressed the State Legislature, seven legislators filed a formal protest with Gov. Robert O. Blood against the Governor's introduction in which he referred to England as "our fatherland."

Chaplain Edwin Young also referred to England as "our fatherland."

"We bitterly resent the reference made by you to England as our fatherland," the protest informed the Governor." "We, as Americans, cannot have two fatherlands. The only place to be a fatherland, to us, is the good old U. S. A."

Army Urged To Modernize Its Command

The Army was urged yesterday by one of its own officers to replace "conservatives and traditionalists" in high commands by men better able to understand modern warfare.

Lieut. Col. Thomas R. Phillips, former instructor at the Army's Command and General Staff School, declared that the Nation might have to pay in "needless head and wounded" and "even lost wars" for not modernizing its weapons and tactics in the post-World War years.

In an article prepared for a forthcoming issue of the Infantry Journal, Phillips declares that the Army has "few enough capable military students" and few of them in policy-making posts.

In support of his contention, Phillips declared that the possibilities of the tank were generally not recognized in the American Army until the present war forcibly demonstrated them.

"Here is a weapon ideally suited to the greatest industrial nation on earth and to a soldier personnel, every one of whom is able to drive a car and has some elemental mechanical education," he declared.

"At the outbreak of the European war we had some 300 light tanks, we had no homogeneous armored divisions capable of independent action . . . The reasons for the shortage of tanks are exclusively our own fault.

Phillips' lecture to his colleagues, entitled "Traditionalism and Military Defeat," goes on to criticize the Army for not motorizing supply trains, creating self-contained combat teams or replacing World War French field guns with modern howitzers until 1939.

The writer, now a general staff officer in Puerto Rico, describes maneuvers in which troops marched all night when they could have been carried in motor trucks "completely around the division being attacked, three times in a single night."

"It is like a fantasy," he said, "the nostalgia of men who want to return to a never-never land."

Mrs. Roosevelt Backs Symphony By Word and Deed

Mrs. Roosevelt sent a subscription to the National Symphony Orchestra's campaign for funds yesterday with a note expressing hope for the drive's success.

"I have always enjoyed the concerts which I have been able to attend and I think the District is fortunate in having this orchestra," wrote the First Lady.

Another appeal for the symphony's support came from Dr. Kurt Hetzel, conductor of the Washington Civic Orchestra, who declared:

"Now, there is talk about disbanding the orchestra. Suppose the owner of a great and beautiful house, who spends a lot of money on its upkeep, would, all of a sudden, throw his piano on the street, with the explanation that he cannot afford the price of a tuning any longer?"

The campaign, which was still $50,000 short of its $107,600 goal yesterday, ends at noon February 20.

NATIONALLY FAMOUS
Simplex Flexies Shoes
FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

"Gosh, I don't know what I'd do without my Simplex Flexies. They're plenty smart and smooth as a song. Look inside of 'em. Not a wrinkle, not a rough stitch, not a tack to rub a gal's foot the wrong way. And soft! . . . as a baby's foot. But they sure give support. I started wearing 'em way back in my play-yard. Guess that's the reason I can go like a truck horse the livelong day, then trip the light fantastic at night." Simplex Flexies Co-Eds in Shining-Black Spring Patent.
